

*Come on. Be honest.
Some night, maybe, when you're alone with your thoughts, don't you* ever ask yourself, "Who's really in charge of our nation's colleges and universities?" If you have pondered this question, then perhaps it will give you solace and encouragement to know that you are not alone—others have asked themselves this very question. In fact, a group of people at Editorial Projects for Education, Inc., a nonprofit organization associated with the American Alumni Council, has attempted to answer the question in the 16-page supplement to which this issue of Sooner Magazine is devoted. And for those who haven't thought much about this question and for those who think they know the answer, the article "Who's in Charge" should be particularly informative. No matter what interest group you represent—alumni, faculty, student, regent, or university president—this issue is worthy of your consideration.
