4 RELICS OF ANTIQUITY

How did a small, low-budget university museum in the American Southwest acquire a marvelous collection of treasures from classical antiquity? Each acquisition comes with an anecdote almost as interesting as the item itself.

10 PRENTICE GAUTT: A SOONER'S STORY

Today he is associate commissioner of the Big Eight, liked, respected, admired, but in 1956 he was just an 18-year-old kid trying to do what no other black had ever done — play football at the University of Oklahoma.

16 THE GIFT OF HOPE

Although bone marrow transplants still are considered high-risk, progress is being made every day in a sophisticated new treatment unit at Oklahoma Memorial Hospital directed by OU's Robert Epstein and Bradley Slease.

21 BACK TO THE DRAWING BOARD

Even the most carefully conceived architectural plan becomes outmoded in time; however, the original architect seldom gets the opportunity to do the update. Betty Jackson is the exception. Her clients keep coming back for more.

25 WORLD LITERATURE TODAY AT 60

A half-century-plus-10 may not be everyone's favorite age, but for the University's prestigious international literary quarterly, the occasion was a tribute to the contributions of its five editors and hundreds of reviewers.

30 MRS. SHULTZ GOES TO LAW SCHOOL

For a woman to go to law school was unusual in 1964. For anyone to first enter those hallowed halls at the age of 67 is unheard of even today. Someone must have neglected to tell Audrey Shultz that it just couldn't be done.
