CONTENTS

4 INSIDE THE ENERGY CENTER

As a building project, the Energy Center is the most ambitious ever attempted in state higher education, but the interdisciplinary academic/industrial partnership going on inside is even more impressive than the facility.

11 THE NEWS BROTHERS

At a time in their lives when most men would be content to savor their retirement, this quartet of Sooner reporters still prowls the halls of the State Capitol in search of the angles their younger colleagues often miss.

15 THE WRITING PROGRAM THAT WORKS

When a shocked nation discovered that Johnny couldn't read — nor could he write — the English department launched a pilot program to make the hypothetical lad conversant with his own language. An eighth-year report.

20 WHEN THE MAESTROS CAME TO HOUSTON

An OU professor and gifted violist, Wayne Crouse recalls orchestral life under the batons of the legendary Leopold Stokowski and the revered Sir John Barbirolli, an experience he kindly calls "a study in contrasts."

26 CITIZENSHIP AND NATIONAL SERVICE

Are a college education and ownership of a home entitlements? With the cost of both elements of the American dream escalating alarmingly, an Oklahoma congressman has proposed a controversial plan linking grants to service.

29 NEWS VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

Streeter Stuart intended to spend his life standing before students, not sitting before a microphone. But fate intervened and a would-be Spanish teacher became Boston's best-known broadcaster. More "Sooner Memories."
