CONTENTS

3 REGENT FISHER COMES HOME

As a child, Ada Lois Sipuel had to be taught the meaning of "race riot"; years later her U.S. Supreme Court case gave meaning to "equal educational opportunity." Today she serves on the board she sued for admission to OU.

12 AMONG THE BRIGHTEST AND THE BEST

The National Merit, National Achievement and National Hispanic Scholars can write their own tickets in the highly competitive student recruiting wars. In steadily increasing numbers, their destination has been the University of Oklahoma.

14 THE NEW NURSE

The nursing graduate of the 1990s breaks the stereotype of the bedpan attendant who chose a career to meet a handsome young doctor. These women—and men—are highly trained health care practitioners with a variety of professional options.

18 ALLAN HOUSER: A LIFE IN ART

The retrospective exhibition of the works of a world-renowned Native American sculptor spent a triumphant summer at the Fred Jones Jr. Memorial Museum of Art, providing an opportunity for a Sooner Magazine visit with the artist.

25 THE BRUISE BROTHERS

The Terrible Hotts, the brothers Reeds, Johnson, Burriss, Selmon, Owens and Lashar are just a few of the family names that have dotted Sooner football rosters since the game was introduced in 1895. Now add to the list the Colliers.

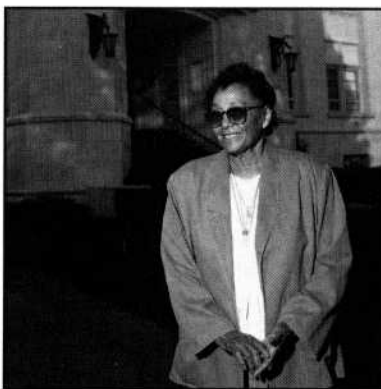

30 SOONER SPOTLIGHT ON RICHARD L. CIFELLI

The associate curator of paleontology at OU's Oklahoma Museum of Natural History may not be able to accept the Biblical challenge to make "dry bones live again," but he can use them to piece together a portrait of prehistoric Earth.

ON THE COVER

Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher's appointment to the OU Board of Regents was announced on the steps of Monnet Hall, the old Law Barn she struggled so courageously to enter in the late '40s. The story of one woman's pursuit of equal opportunity begins on Page 3.
