3 BEYOND "THE YEAR OF THE INDIAN"

In Oklahoma, 1992 was declared "The Year of the Indian," with appropriate publicity. But at the University of Oklahoma, each year sees increasing emphasis on a wide variety of programs celebrating our Native American heritage.

• A CLASSROOM CLOSEUP on Page 11

Sooner Magazine visits one of the most successful courses on Native American culture, Visiting Professor Virginia Giglio's Music for Non-Majors 3213.

13 A WIN-WIN PROPOSITION

In November the voters of Oklahoma approved the first system-wide higher education bond issue since 1968. Planners at the University of Oklahoma couldn't be happier as they ready a rash of capital improvements on three campuses.

17 HAROLD'S: THE MAN AND "THE LOOK"

Harold Powell graduated from OU in 1948, walked across the street to the Campus Corner and opened a clothing store that has become the fashion byword ever since, locally and now in 18 other locations in Oklahoma, Texas and points east.

23 HITTING THE COMEBACK TRAIL

With a 1992 College World Series appearance to build on, the Boys of Spring-and-Early-Summer are poised to bring Sooner baseball back to the glory days of yesteryear under the expert guidance of Coach Larry Cochell, now in his third season.

26 SEND IN THE CLOWNS

The '50s and '60s were the heyday of the campus variety show—Campus Chest, ODK, Engineers, Sooner Scandals—and the kings of comedy were Schwartz and Bledsoe, a couple of crazies who got so good at making people laugh that they just couldn't quit.

31 SOONER SPOTLIGHT • JAMES ESTES

A cross between a museum and a library is the way Curator James Estes explains the Bebb Herbarium, where 200,000 specimens of Oklahoma plant life dating back to the 1890s give botanists a glimpse of the past and a pattern for the future.

ON THE COVER

The Oklahoma Museum of Natural History, long part of the University as Stovall Museum, will be moving to a magnificent new home in a few years, thanks to a state capital improvement bond issue that will provide $66.7 million to OU-related projects. See Page 13.
