CONTENTS

5 HABITATS FOR HORSES

More from sentiment than horse sense, Stan and Mary Ann Gralla set out to convert a run-down, territorial farm in horse country into their home and offices, never dreaming that they were blazing two new career paths.

10 COMING TO OUR EMOTIONAL RESCUE

At Shidler Elementary School in Oklahoma City, each kindergarten, third and fourth grader declares, "I Am Special!"—just one part of the programs for children and adults supervised by OUHSC's Emotional Health Center.

15 TREASURES FROM THE ARCHIVES

In "My Dear Friend: David Ross Boyd and the Details of Office," historian David Levy uses random selections from the first president's correspondence to convey a staggering range of responsibilities borne by this versatile man.

20 CYBERSOONERS

Even as they wander happily in the visionary world of Virtual Reality, a group of campus "hackers," "techies" and "cybernauts" admit that the "reality" part still has a long way to go—which dampens their enthusiasm not at all.

25 THE MAGIC MIRROR AND THE SILVER SCREEN

Law dominates American life and culture in ways unimaginable to our founding fathers—yet the impression of our legal system formed by most Americans comes not from courtrooms but from television and movie screens.

31 SOONER SPOTLIGHT • CORAL McCALLISTER

OU's biological illustrator spends most of her time producing slides, photos, graphs and detailed illustrations for her department, but she is becoming best known for the scientific cartoons that make complex behavior understandable.

ON THE COVER

The OU College of Law's Rennard Strickland is both legal scholar/teacher and unabashed movie buff. In "The Magic Mirror and the Silver Screen," he combines enthusiasms to analyze the public's view of lawyers as portrayed in film. See Page 25.
