CONTENTS

2 REINVENTING REALITY

Michael Waters, who subtitled this article "Greg Burns and the Art of the Possible," invites Sooner Magazine readers to meet a talented, courageous and practical artist who overcame life's challenges with ability and determination.

9 USE IT OR LOSE IT

You may not want to hear OU geriatrician Marie Bernard's message to middle agers, but if you want to avoid a frail, dependent old age, you had better get up and start moving—and her advice comes complete with illustrations.

13 A VISIT TO BOYD HOUSE

Alumni and friends of the University, who for nearly 30 years mourned the passing of Boyd House as the historic home of OU presidents, are applauding its restoration as a gleaming tribute to graciousness and Sooner tradition.

19 ACCOMMODATING THE ARTS

Displaced by a fire that destroyed its Quartz Mountain home, the Oklahoma Summer Arts Institute turned to old friend David Boren, who invited the young artists to inaugurate the new addition to OU's Catlett Music Center.

22 THE GREAT TICKET SCANDAL OF 1933

Oklahoma's colorful politics had no greater practitioner than Alfalfa Bill Murray, a governor who knew no problem that couldn't be solved by calling out the National Guard—even to take tickets at the OU-A&M football game.

27 DOC'S PONIES

A couple of brothers from Sapulpa bought two white Shetland ponies, had built a miniature Conestoga wagon, called them "Boomer," "Sooner" and the "Sooner Schooner" and sold the "mascot" idea to the University of Oklahoma.

ON THE COVER
