LIGHTS ON FOR OU RESEARCH — The lights of the new Peggy and Charles Stephenson Research and Technology Center, on Jenkins Street north of Highway 9, testify to the nearing completion of approximately two-thirds of the first building in the OU Research Campus. Among the multi-purpose facility's first occupants will be OU's world-class program in gene sequencing and new efforts in functional genomics, headed by George Lynn Cross Research Professor Bruce Roe, with move-in planned for the end of the spring semester. The remainder of the center already is shelled, and its completion is anticipated in fall 2004.
