

Robert Taylor

QUICK! THE CAMERA!—Late risers at the University of Oklahoma risk missing the campus' rare snow scenes. Photographers grab their cameras and head out on those occasions when the snow is heavy and moist and clings to trees and landmarks, such as the south oval's lovely Pitman Fountain. Then just as quickly, it melts and is gone, preserved only in calendar shots and the prospective student view books.