4 CALL TO ACTION Students, faculty, staff and administration gathered in the union Jan. 22 to express their pain and frustration after a second racist video by OU students in less than four years made national news. President Gallogly asks for help from the university community in ending systemic racism at OU.

8 NOT IN VAIN After the death of a patient, a young doctor promised to find a more efficient way to identify any remaining cancer cells in the body. With a new imaging isotope known as Fluorothymidine, that promise is being fulfilled.

12 INSTRUMENTAL BEAUTY Art and science blend form and function in the tools of physicists, doctors and engineers of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. For a glimpse at these treasures, one need go no further than the History of Science Collections on the fifth floor of Bizzell Memorial Library.

18 DATELINE: WASHINGTON, D.C. Three OU Journalism and Mass Communication students made the most of a semester in the nation's capital, reporting on issues relevant to the Sooner State and coming back with experience no classroom could offer.

22 BEATING THE ODDS WITH ACES Adults who have dealt with adverse childhood experiences typically have more chronic health issues than their peers. Now a simple questionnaire may help doctors and patients uncover the causes behind unresolved health problems.

26 CODE SOONERS An OU Computer Science program that teaches coding to high school students across Oklahoma is piquing an interest in STEM curriculum before students even get to campus.
