4 A MUSEUM REIMAGINED In October, the Fred Jones Jr. Museum of Art opened its doors to a complete reinstallation of its permanent collection, including many works that had not been seen by the public in decades.

10 BUILDING A STRONG FOUNDATION During his OU presidency (1926-1941), William Bennett Bizzell realized the university's need for an independent, not-for-profit entity that would manage private giving to OU, honor donor intent for each gift and grow the funds of those who invested in OU's future. That vision would become the OU Foundation, which marks its 75th year in 2020.

18 OU TAKES A QUANTUM LEAP The world is on the brink of a technological revolution led by pioneering applications of quantum physics. Through its new Center for Quantum Research and Technology, OU is poised to become a center for excellence in this emerging field.

26 THE SCIENCE OF HOPE OU psychologist Chan Hellman discovered that having hope not only gives people a better outlook on life, it influences more positive outcomes. Hellman is now an internationally sought authority on the growing field of hope science.

THE LANGUAGE OF HOPE AND COURAGE As artist-in-residence at Children's Hospital, OU alumna Ginna Dowling gives young patients and their families the chance to tell their personal stories with colored paper and imagination.
