

IN EVERY ISSUE —

- 2 Sooner Shorts • News and Events
- 16 The Big Idea • How does one bridge the gap between the complex languages of English and Chinese?
- 24 Sooner Nation • Bola Ibadapo, more than a winning smile
- 31 Lest We Forget ... • Dora McFarland, crusading mathematician
- 32 Your Letters
- 33 Epilogue • Crimson and skis

On the Cover • Cortney Bolt, a citizen of the Potawatomi Nation, left, and Brittani Candioto, Muscogee (Creek), are part of the Center for Tribal Social Work at OU-Tulsa. In addition to her role as program director, Bolt serves as an “Academic Auntie” for students like Candioto, who may be the first in their families to attend college. The center seeks to provide better outcomes for Native American families in need of social services by recruiting more Indigenous students into the field of social work.

Photo by Saralyn O'Donnell

EDITOR

Lynette Lobban

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Anne Barajas Harp

ART DIRECTOR

George T. Dotson

STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Travis Caperton

PUBLISHER

*The University of Oklahoma Foundation Inc.
Guy L. Patton, President*