HOMECOMING is a great day in Soonerland. The university, faculty, students and alumni invite you to return to the campus this year and participate in the varied program which has been planned for your enjoyment.

For the last eighteen years on an early week end in November Sooners of other years have been making the pilgrimage to Norman. Football games have been won and lost but the team always gives all it has and that is all alumni expect. We hope to win this year, but it's no set-up in spite of the bad luck of our worthy opponents earlier in the season. But—after all the game isn't ALL of Homecoming.

First there is the Oklahoma City party now a well established homecoming tradition. The festivities start about 7:00 p. m. Friday with a famous Skirvin dinner on the roof of the Skirvin hotel. Plates are only a dollar and your dinner ticket admits you also to the dance which follows. The speeches will be short and snappy—remember alumni prexy Mike Monroney's famous glass eye stunt and Dave Shockelford's representation of K. U.'s alumni president last year. This year's program will be just as good. President Bizzell and Bennie Owen will do the honors for the university.

At least four hundred grads and exes are expected and that's about all the places available so send your reservation to Glenn "Dad" Faris, '20, Chamber of Commerce, Oklahoma City right away to be assured of a place. Between courses and dances there will be lots of "remembering whens" and all that sort of thing so don't miss this party.

The usual colorful homecoming parade comes Saturday morning—the Ruf Neks and Jazz Hounds are back on the campus and will add much to this event. The parade starts early this year—9:00 a. m. in order that there may be time for the polo game with Texas scheduled for 10:30. We have one of the very best collegiate polo teams in the world today. Even if you don't know much about "the sport of kings" take this in and you'll never miss another. "Capt'n Jerry" Waters has done wonders with his outfit and this is an opportunity you must not miss.

Before the game take a tour about town and see the fraternity and sorority house decorations. The boys and girls really do some work on their houses and produce some marvelous effects. If your house isn't up to standard stop in and tell the brothers how you did it in the good old days.

"Came the Game"—instead of the dawn—as they say in the movies. The kick off will be promptly at 2:00 p. m. on Owen field—and who doesn't get a real thrill when the whistle blows and the pig skin soars thru the clear crisp November sky and twenty-two huskies start for each other to do or die for Alma Mater. Win, lose or draw it's going to be a great game—don't miss it.

Then too—Homecoming isn't all over when the gun fires at the end of the last quarter for there is going to be a big get-together-reception-dansant and whatnot in the Union ball room after the game. The Norman alumni invite you to be their guests and have another "session" over a cup of coffee or dance with the old girl—the one who almost took your pin or perhaps did—along with a number of others. Just follow the band off the field to the Union building and come on up to the ball room. Everybody will be there and if you have missed seeing someone here is the opportunity to find him—or her and pass the time away pleasantly while the traffic clears away.

Now isn't this a program which assures not a dull moment. When the orchestra finally plays Boomer Sooner as the twilight falls you will make a solemn vow never to miss Homecoming
