With Sooner Clubs

SOONER clubs in Oklahoma show promise of greater activity this year than ever before. The Norman Sooner Club began the program early in the fall, followed shortly by Tulsa with its rousing meeting preceding the Tulsa-Oklahoma football game. Oklahoma City held its annual election of officers at the time the Homecoming program for this year was planned.

What many alumni voted the best pre-Homecoming party ever held at Oklahoma City, that of last year, will be a minor affair compared to the pre-Homecoming party November 3, if plans now projected by the Oklahoma City Sooner Club materialize.

Capital alumni met Wednesday, October 11, in Oklahoma City to lay plans and to elect officers. The program committee will consist of Mike Monroney, Dave Shackelford and Jamie Bell Replogle Long. This committee will complete details of the capital party, which will include a dinner at the Biltmore hotel in Oklahoma City, a pep meeting following immediately thereafter, and a dance to end the evening. The dinner-dance has been priced at $1 a person. The program is given in greater detail elsewhere.

Fisher Ames was elected president of the Oklahoma City Sooner Club, Fisher Muldrow, vice president, Mrs. Long, vice president, and Glenn W. Faris, secretary-treasurer.

Tulsa Sooner Club

More than two hundred Sooners from northeastern Oklahoma attended the annual Tulsa Sooner Club party held in the University Club Friday night, October 6. It was pronounced by many as being the best Tulsa party yet held. That toastmaster par excellence, Walter Ferguson, vice president of the National Bank of Tulsa, directed the even flow of wit and seriousness of the party, while the athletic department's Chauncey Depew, Bo Rowland, assistant coach, lived up to his reputation as an after-dinner speaker. Lewie Hardage was also on the program from Norman, while John Rogers, attorney and former regent, spoke for Tulsa alumni.

President Bizzell, unfortunately was unable to attend the meeting, but received an ovation nevertheless when Mr. Ferguson praised the work he had done in building a greater University of Oklahoma. For a while it appeared that it was going to be a President Bizzell meeting, rather than a pre-game rally.

After the speaking, the National Bank of Tulsa orchestra, furnished by the bank for the entertainment of alumni, put itching feet through their capers on the ballroom floor.

The committee in charge of the party consisted of Mrs. Earle S. Porter, president of the Tulsa Sooner Club, Travis Milsten, vice president, Oran McCain, secretary.

Norman Sooner Club

The Norman Sooner Club has resumed this year the monthly meetings begun last year by Leonard Logan, '14as, as president. New officers elected were Harold Belknap, '25jourm, business manager of The Norman Transcript, president; John O. Moseley, '17M.A., vice president; Frank S. Cleckler, '21bus, secretary-treasurer. The club meets monthly in the Oklahoma Union building.

Four of Tulsa's new lawyers who passed the bar examination during the summer are University of Oklahoma law school graduates, according to the Tulsa Tribune. A survey conducted by that paper showed that John H. Poe, '33law, has already affiliated with the Poe, Lundy and Morgan law firm. Milton W. Hardy, '33law, son of Summer Hardy, head of the Sinclair-Prairie legal department, will practice in Tulsa. Kenneth P. Reed, '33law, and Don McCormick, '33law, had not yet announced plans.

John Brett, '28law, and Rex Holden, '29law, have been added to the faculty of the Oklahoma City School of Law for the autumn term which opened early in September.

Bradford Risinger, '23as, still serves as city clerk and commissioner of finance in Sand Springs. The history of Soonerland political parties chronicles Risinger's early training as an organizer.

Social privileges of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity have been withdrawn for the remainder of the semester by the Interfraternity Council as a result of a protest by Delta Upsilon that the Betas violated rush rules in taking Jack McKay, Jerry Bates and Kenneth Burns of Tulsa as "paying guests" after the trio had pledged D. U.
