Who's Who On the Campus

A delightful combination of conscientious student and whimsical humorist is David St. Clair, who leaves for Oxford, England, in September to study natural science for three years in Oxford university. He was named one of two Rhodes scholars from Oklahoma at the regional examinations held in New Orleans last December.

Since 1929 David had been the wonder of the student body and faculty for his capacity in the two fields of science and literature. Chosen as the most outstanding senior receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, he led his school in the commencement exercises, June 3. At the close of the summer session this year he will be given the degree of Bachelor of Science with a major in geology. Hours of A made by David totaled 132 at the end of the first semester of the past school year.

Besides supporting himself while in college by serving as a guard at the Oklahoma State Hospital, David has had enough initiative and imagination to study four languages, Spanish, Italian, German and French. His hobby during undergraduate years was translating Dante's "Divine Comedy" in spare hours.

Conditions and customs of England will not be new to David St. Clair because his early home life and his prep-school, St. John's Military Academy, have been an adequate background for a life which, in some respects, is quite different from the average boy's life in America.
