Who's Who On the Campus

"They said she couldn't, but she did."

Though brief and somewhat terse, that expresses both the skepticism which surrounded the appointment of a woman as editor of the Oklahoma Daily last spring, and the results Christine Squire Hill has obtained in her four and one-half months as the first woman skipper of the campus daily.

The daily ship has sailed seas that were far from balmy this year in the Ruf

Nek head patting spree, and the D. D. M. C. investigation, coupled with campus politics at a pitch heat most of the time. However, it has consistently managed to keep its equilibrium, not to speak of emerging with the lion's share of the laurels on many occasions, due to Christine's courageous and energetic efforts.

Mrs Hill's experience in publications includes serving as woman's editor of the daily last year, and as sorority editor on the 1932 Sooner, university yearbook. Her campus activities number among them Theta Sigma Phi, professional journalistic fraternity for women, and membership on the executive board of the Women's Self Governing Association.

Due to the eight semester rule, making all students who have been in college for longer than that period ineligible to take part in campus activities, Mrs Hill becomes ineligible to hold her present position as editor next semester, but will remain in the university and do work toward a master of arts degree in government. She is a Kappa Kappa Gamma and hails from Chandler, Oklahoma.
