Rev. John K. Montgomery, pastor of the Park Avenue Methodist church, Worcester, Massachusetts, was the subject for a short sketch recently in the Worcester Telegram. A large picture accompanied the story about his valuable work in Worcester. The story follows:

"Although he has been pastor of Park Avenue Methodist Church for less than a year, Rev. John K. Montgomery has been instrumental in an especially rapid growth of the church. Reports at the recent fourth quarterly conference of the church show that bills for local expenses have been met and substantial increases made in payments for New England conference expenses.

"Rev. Mr. Montgomery has been successful in adding 50 families to the church constituency list and increasing the attendance at the Sunday morning services and the Sunday school. He has sponsored several new organizations including a Girl Scout troop, Men's Association, Epworth League for young people of high school age and the re-organization of the Ladies' Aid Society into the group system.

"Rev. Mr. Montgomery came here from Newport, Vt. He was formerly pastor of the First Methodist Church, Brattleboro, Vt., and the churches at Weston and Landgrove, Vt. He is a native of Pennsylvania and was graduated from the University of Oklahoma and Boston University School of Theology."

THE EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

should be left to scientists in other fields that are concerned with the statistical information.

The theorists present at the meeting agreed only partially with his viewpoint and the discussion as to the merits of retiring to the "Ivory Tower" were thrown across the open meeting.

It all ended in a brilliant discussion of this problem and left everyone in attendance with a clearer view of the two opposing schools of researchers.

Other sessions brought out salient points of educational problems today. At the Friday morning meeting, a picture of conditions among tenant farmers was given by David Y. Thomas, head of the department of history and political science, University of Arkansas. Mr. Thomas urged teachers to acquaint themselves not only with such conditions in this country but also the reasons why such conditions were allowed to exist.

Boyd H. Bode, professor of education, Ohio State University, discussed the organization of the arts and sciences college at this session. He outlined the needs for a better and more thorough correlation of subjects in the college. He said that each department taught its subject, but that there was no department that correlated these subjects to give the student a clear picture of the inter-relations of the various fields of knowledge.

Governor Marland, at the closing dinner, discussed the double-teaming of the professor and the politician. He said that the entrance of the researcher into the government administration was a healthful sign. The "brain trust" idea, he said, is sound and one that will be perpetuated in future administrations.

The general committee, to which goes much credit for the success of the conference, was headed by Charles M. Perry, head of the University department of philosophy.

Other members of the committee were L. B. Hoisington, Allen M. Ruggles, J. J. Rhyne, Royden J. Dangerfield, Frederick Lynne Ryan, Ralph H. Records, B. A. Botkin, H. H. Herbert and Homer L. Dodge.
