The Colbys Man the Dikes

Sam Colby, '31law, and Mrs. Mildred Potts Colby, '32as, recently used a little ingenuity to keep their car in working order while enjoying a Sunday afternoon drive near their home in Madill.

The Madill Record reported the Colbys' adventures:

Sam Colby, county attorney, doesn't care much for chewing gum—to chew—but he does like it to stretch in home on.

Sunday afternoon Colby took his wife, baby, mother and sister—or at least they started—to Washita Bridge. They were driving along leisurely when all of a sudden the radiator fell off the car.

They came to a halt. Colby picked up the radiator and placed it back on the car, but the radiator had a few holes knocked in it. Then was when Mrs. Colby went to work. She chewed two packages of gum and the holes in the radiator were patched.

But another problem—the radiator was without water. A pint jar (that was used to hold baby bottle nipples) was emptied, used to carry water for some distance—and incidentally one pint of water brought them back to town.

Milburns Living in Missouri

George Milburn, '30ex, after having spent a year in England and Spain as a Guggenheim Fellow, and Mrs. Milburn and their daughter, Janet, are now settled in Pineville, Missouri, where the Milburns expect to make their future home. They have purchased a small farm formerly occupied by Vance Randolph, famous Ozarkian authority.
