E. Bruce Givens,'15ex, employe in the Norman postoffice, was elected president of the clerks division at the Oklahoma convention of the National Association of Post Office Clerks and Letter Carriers September 7 in Enid.

Dr. Leroy Long, jr., '15ex, made a month's tour of Europe during the summer in company with 40 surgeons from this section of the country, and returned with a conviction that America is far ahead of Europe in surgery. The Daily Oklahoman quoted him as saying:

"Before the war, young American doctors thought only of going to Europe to study. Paris, Berlin or Vienna. Now that is all changed, and European physicians want to come to America. Many of their leading doctors have received the greater part of their training in the United States. America is definitely the leader in surgery.

"Norway and Sweden I found to be the most interesting countries of the entire tour, and the ones showing the greatest improvement in and facilities for medical work. They are in excellent shape because they capitalize on the fact that they were not so closely drawn into the World war.

"While there is little actual poverty in either of these countries, their system of socialized medicine, which is being advocated on every hand in the United States, is far from satisfactory. Each person pays a dollar a year for all the medical attention he needs, but the attention is by no means adequate.

"The medical profession is unpaid, and is frowned upon by parents whose children wish to enter it. The high regard which characterizes the American attitude for the profession is absent in most European countries."

1917

1918

B. A. Ames,'18as, '19law, now an Oklahoma City attorney, notified federal authorities immediately when he received a penciled note demanding $2,000 from him under threat of death. Four G-Men watched as Ames, at their direction, drove by a vacant lot and tossed out a dummy package. About 45 minutes later a youth who appeared at the lot and picked up the package was arrested. Prompt co-operation with the authorities had thwarted an extortion attempt.

Sadie Shacklett,'18as, teacher in Webster Junior high school at Oklahoma City, made a 22,000-mile trip to Union of South Africa, Rhodesia, and Portuguese East Africa last summer. She reported that some of the unusual sights she saw were fish with legs, fish with eyebrows, a three-cornered fish, a man who had 57 brothers and sisters, brown and yellow diamonds, women from India wearing jewels set in the sides of their noses like ear screws, and the "bluest sky in the world."

Mrs. Edna Muldrow, teacher of English and journalism in Norman high school, has resigned to accept a position in the English department at Southwestern State Teachers college, Weatherford.

Lynn Riggs, '23ex, nationally known writer and dramatist, is leading a very attractive life in Santa Fe, New Mexico, according to Frank Dennis, '29as, staff member of the Daily Oklahoman, who interviewed Riggs recently at Santa Fe.

"Riggs is 36 years old, has no office hours, quits work when he wants to, lies in the sun or shade as he prefers and when he prefers, lives alternately in Hollywood, Santa Fe, and New York as the season and his state of mind dictate, and otherwise has an enviable existence," Dennis wrote.

The reporter adds that the catch in the story is that Riggs won the right to this pleasant existence by years of the hardest kind of work, and that he is still working hard.

Riggs is writing a new play, entitled "World Elsewhere," which is about Americans in Mexico. If all goes smoothly, he expects to see the play produced in New York early in 1937. Or he might return to Hollywood to do scenario work for a time.

He is one of the few writers in the country who has achieved success in both play writing and screen writing. Avoiding a contract with any particular film company, he free lances in his scenario work.

And he expects to visit the University and his old home at Claremore next spring.

Weather extremes in Oklahoma are in sharp contrast to the always temperate weather in Hawaii, says Mrs. LeBeryl Henderson Alexander, '27sc, who visited her parents at Tulsa last summer after a three-year residence in Honolulu.

The temperature in Hawaii ranges from 71.2 degrees Fahrenheit in January to a peak of 78.4 degrees in August, she said. Even the water at Waikiki ranges only from 76.4 degrees to 82.7 degrees the year around.

Mrs. Alexander, who has an M.D. degree from George Washington university in addition to her degree from the University of Oklahoma, went to Hawaii in 1933 with her husband, S. H. Alexander, a captain in the United States army.

She served as bacteriologist for the territory board of health in Honolulu for two years, and in Tripler general hospital, an army hospital, during the last year.

In an interview published in the Tulsa World, Mrs. Alexander described Hawaii as one of the healthiest areas of any where American soldiers are stationed.

Free from the epidemics commonly found in tropical countries, and with strict government regulations concerning the vaccination of all visitors (Canadians and Americans excluded) quarantines for all animals brought into the territory and other safeguards, the islands are enabled to lay claim not only to ideal weather conditions but to a remarkably good health record.

However, Hawaii has its unemployment problem, with thousands of jobless persons registered for relief. There is an overabundance of skilled labor—particularly in the lines of clerks, typists, stenographers, teachers and nurses, she said.

PETROLEUM SCHOOL NEEDS A HOME

There is an urgent need for petroleum engineering library and study hall. The present library is in a room which is also used for an office, seminar and locker room. A good technical library would be beneficial to the industry of the state as well as the students at the University. At present many men engaged in petroleum work throughout the state often consult our reference library in an effort to solve their problems.

The University of Oklahoma should lead all schools of the world in graduate research in petroleum engineering. This can become a reality only when proper facilities are provided. At present the graduate student must set up his research apparatus in the laboratory together with the undergraduate students who are working on routine projects. Scientific research cannot be carried on successfully under such conditions. Each research project should be in an individual room where temperature and light conditions can be controlled and the research apparatus would be free from disturbance. At least six research rooms are needed. A committee has been appointed to obtain industrial fellowships to provide funds for deserving students who desire to do advanced work at the University. The various companies will naturally be more interested in financing fellowships if they are convinced the research is to be conducted under ideal conditions.

Last year 522 men from the industry attended the Southwestern Gas Measurement Short Course, a University-sponsored activity. Many other similar educational service courses for the men of the industry could be conducted if floor space were available.

Samples of all oils purchased by the State Board of Public Affairs for the institutions under its jurisdiction are tested in the University laboratories to determine if specifications are met. This work will be expanded to include all lubricants and fuels purchased by the board as soon as building facilities will permit.

From time to time a piece of museum type of equipment is received. There should be a historical museum included in the Petroleum Engineering building, to contain the old documents, photographs, and equipment that has played such an important part in the development of the petroleum industry. Wall space should be provided for paintings of the Oklahomans who have been responsible for making this state a leader among the oil producing states of the nation.

The School of Petroleum Engineering, University of Oklahoma, is known throughout the world for the high type of educational and research work that is being done here. The school has been successful in the past because the faculty have been untiring in their work, the alumni and other men of the industry have co-operated to the fullest extent, and the student body is made up of men whose primary purpose is to obtain an education.

If advancements are to be made and the reputation of the School of Petroleum Engineering is to be maintained, a suitable building must be provided.

Many of the schools of the North and East, such as the Universities of Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, have realized the importance of petroleum engineering education and have adopted courses of a specialized nature which are Petroleum engineering courses at the University of Wisconsin are taught in this new $575,000 Mechanical Engineering building.
