

THANKS

To my Sooner friends—I want to thank you sincerely for the support you gave me in my race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Fifth District.

No one could have had more loyal friends. You have worked unselfishly and have given your time and energy to win this race for me. Without you I could not have succeeded.

I can hardly feel that I deserve the help and the fine things that you have said of me in this campaign. I only hope that I can measure up to your expectations. You Sooners have helped to nominate me for a most important office. I am a young man and I must fill that office in an honorable and courageous way. I realize the greatness of this opportunity for service to everyone and to my native State. I pray that I will never disappoint you.

So, until I can see you personally to thank you for your efforts, please accept my thanks for your help.

Mike Monroney

AS the University of Oklahoma proceeds with its Semi-Centennial program, which will reach a climax in 1942 when the institution's fiftieth anniversary is celebrated, there is an important service that graduates of the School of Law can perform for the University.

The last year has been devoted to careful preparations for the Semi-Centennial program, by small groups and committees. The time has arrived when the assistance of larger groups is essential. One of the principal aims of the program is to explain to the public the need for gifts and bequests in building a greater University of Oklahoma, and law graduates, perhaps more than any other one group of alumni, come in contact with men and women of wealth. As attorneys, they are often called on to give personal advice in the disposition of estates, in the making of wills, in working out insurance programs, and in selecting worthy projects or institutions for benefactions.

The establishment of a University of Oklahoma Foundation, now near completion, provides a specific agency for accepting gifts to be used in the promotion of higher education in Oklahoma. The donor has complete freedom in specifying exactly how the gift or bequest shall be administered, if he so desires. Since colleges and universities have proved to be about the most permanent and stable of any of our institutions, a gift or bequest to a state university is as safe and useful a gift as can be imagined.

Most men who have made fortunes beyond the needs of themselves and their families feel a desire to return part of their money to society—to put it to some thoroughly constructive use. O. U. alumni can point to the University of Oklahoma Foundation as an almost ideal agency for putting money to work on a permanent basis.

During the last twelve years, more than six million dollars have been bequeathed to Cornell University, and the committee in charge has been advised of wills written by persons still living which contain gifts to that university of at least six million more. Many have made provision to leave something to Cornell in the form of direct gifts of cash, securities, real estate or other property, contingent bequests, living trusts, and annuities to care for loved ones during life, and with the university the ultimate beneficiary.

If O. U. law graduates become familiar with similar possibilities for making bequests to the University of Oklahoma, there is every reason to believe that over a period of years, new sources of vitally needed revenue will be opened to the University.

Calvin Coolidge once said: "To place your name by gift or bequest in the keeping of an active university is to be sure that the name and project with which it is associated will continue down the centuries to quicken the minds and hearts of youth, and thus make a permanent contribution to the welfare of humanity."

Law alumni have many opportunities to spread this idea among the people of Oklahoma.
