Working Dean

"Left guard, did good work at that position in the Texas game, where he nearly ran away with one of the Texas players. He is a consistent player on offense and defense, and promises to be one of the best linemen Oklahoma has ever had. He is the heaviest man on the team and puts all of his weight into the game. He was the only first-year man to receive his 'O' this year."

The Yearbook prediction wasn't wrong. Bennie Owen says today that "Meach," as he was best known, was one of the best linemen and all-around good players that ever stepped on a gridiron. Bennie recalls his co-operative spirit, his sense of fair play, and especially "that good noodle he's got on him."

Mrs. Meacham accompanied her husband on every trip the team made and never missed a game in which he played.

In addition to a full scholastic schedule and his football playing, "Meach" took part in numerous other activities. He was on the track team for three years in the events of hammer-throwing and shot-put, and student member of the University Athletic Council. He was a member of Kappa Sigma social fraternity, of which he was president two years, he was editor of the '13 Sooner Yearbook, member of Pe-et, senior men's honorary leadership and scholarship fraternity, member of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet, was elected to Sigma Delta Chi, national honorary journalistic fraternity, and was winner of the Letzeiser medal for the outstanding student in '14.

The yearbook carried this quotation beneath his senior picture: "There is a perennial nobleness and even sacredness in work."

On graduating in '14, Mr. Meacham was granted a fellowship to continue study on a master's degree at the University. In September, however, President Stratton D. Brooks offered him an instructorship in mathematics. He accepted it with the condition that he could do graduate work at the same time.

September also saw "Meach" back on the football field, this time as freshman coach and assistant to Bennie Owen. He liked boys and was one of them in athletics, although he was every inch the professor in the classroom, Mr. Owen recalls.

He remained freshman coach until 1924 when other work demanded his time. Through this consistent work with boys on the football field, he became interested in helping students through disciplinary work and other extra-teaching activities. His insight into human nature as well as his genial disposition equipped him for the job of assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences which was to be given him in 1926.

Mr. Meacham completed his master's degree work in math at Harvard on leave of absence from the University and received the degree of A. M. there in 1917. Two years later he was advanced to the rank of assistant professor on the O. U. faculty.

Mr. Meacham continued his study of math toward a doctor's degree. He went to the University of Chicago in 1920, where, the next year, he was awarded a senior fellowship in the department of mathematics. He received his Ph. D. there in 1922.

Returning to the University again, he was made associate professor of math. The rank of professor was given him in 1925, and the following year he became assistant to Dr. S. W. Reaves, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

He did further research work at the University of Chicago in 1930-31 in his doctoral field of differential geometry. Today he is a member of such professional groups as the American Mathematics Society, Pi Mu Epsilon, honorary math fraternity, and Sigma Xi, national scientific research fraternity.

As a member of the faculty, Dr. Meacham has always had an important part in the athletic program of the University, even in addition to his coaching which he looked upon as his daily recreation. He was instrumental in the organization of the Oklahoma High School Athletic Association of which he was secretary until 1920. He served as president of the University Athletic Council for ten years, and from 1935 to '38 was O. U.'s faculty representative in the Big Six Conference.

His interest in promoting scholarship has also been recognized. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity and has been elected to honorary membership in Phi Eta Sigma, national scholastic fraternity for freshman men.

Other activities outside his regular work at the University include service on a number of committees and boards.

He aided in the launching of the annual series of public lectures held on the campus during the fall term and is now on the committee in charge of them. It was he, too, who originated the idea of a President's class. He has been on the committee of selection since its inception.

Dean Meacham has been active in University alumni work since the year he became an alumnus. He was president of the University of Oklahoma Association in 1918-19 and he and Mrs. Meacham are Life Members.

Of course the man's life is not all work. Golf provided his recreation after he was forced to give up his football job. Professor L. N. Morgan, a long-time friend and associate, who has played with Dean Meacham considerably, said, "Meach is the only man that I ever saw slice a ball back over his head. He can get into and out of more trouble on a golf course than any man I ever saw."

In recent years added duties have again forced curtailment of his recreational activities. He now spends most of his spare time in his yard and garden or with a book and his pipe. He is exceptionally fond of home-grown roasting ears and friends say that he has raised some of the best in town.

Dean Meacham says, however, that his garden grows smaller every year, for one reason or another. This year his two children Ferrell, 16, and Martha, 13, have made a badminton court on part of it. "So it goes," he muses.

One would almost expect deliberate, thorough "Meach" to smoke a pipe. He does. He and his pipe are almost inseparable. As he sits in his office, he will take his leather tobacco pouch from his pocket, pull its zipper open, push the pipe's bowl into the three-dollar-per-pound Carl Henry, then lean back in his swivel chair to light it. He has only one or two pipes now, he says, but there was a time when he had a "pipe for every day in the week."

Dean Meacham is fond of books but he hasn't the time to read those he would like to have. Mrs. Meacham collects first editions of books printed by the University of Oklahoma Press, and he does well, he says, to keep up with them in addition to the literature in his special field.

O. U.'s dean of the College of Arts and Sciences has a big job. It keeps Ed Meacham busy, but he grins and takes it in his stride.
