Presidential Elections

From Abraham Lincoln
To Franklin D. Roosevelt
By Cortez A. M. Ewing

A "spot news" publication just issued by the University of Oklahoma Press. It shows, through an analysis of the last eighty years of national elections the probabilities for election years to come.

It is a "form sheet" which shows section by section and state by state the tendencies of the balloting and what causes them. For instance, the decisive balance of the presidential vote is controlled by nine western states, which almost invariably choose the winning candidate.

The book indicates the true meaning of third parties, the demands of the grass roots, and a new concept which has crept into voting which is making an increasing play for government intervention in business. The old fundamental idea in America for a political democracy has given way to an actual demand for an economic democracy.
