Medical School

GEN. ROBERT U. PATTERSON, dean of the School of Medicine, has submitted his resignation because of reaching the University's retirement age of 65 years, President Joseph A. Brandt announced in July.

General Patterson, who has headed the Medical School and associated hospitals since 1935, consented to continue as dean until a successor is chosen. The Board of Regents has appointed a medical faculty committee of four to act as a consulting group in the selection of a successor to General Patterson, President Brandt announced.

"General Patterson has done a magnificent job as dean and as supervisor of the University Hospital," President Brandt said. He commented that the dean had "worked miracles" with the medical school in the face of serious difficulties caused by an unreasonably low budget.

► Dr. Paul C. Colonna, professor of orthopaedic surgery and chief of the orthopaedic service in the University and Crippled Children's Hospitals, resigned his position effective August 1 to accept a position as professor of orthopaedic surgery in the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. The appointment to the Pennsylvania School of Medicine, one of the oldest in the country, is a tribute to Dr. Colonna's professional reputation.

Dr. Willis Kelly West, associate professor of orthopaedic surgery, has been appointed acting chairman of the department of orthopaedic surgery and acting chief of the orthopaedic service in the hospitals.

► Dr. Bela Halpert, until recently with the Louisiana State University School of Medicine, New Orleans, has been appointed professor of clinical pathology and director of laboratories of the hospitals. Dr. Halpert has formerly held teaching positions at Johns Hopkins University, the University of Chicago, and Yale University.

► Dean Patterson has been appointed chairman of a committee of three by Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, to investigate certain administrative and professional matters connected with the medical service of the veterans' organization. Dean Patterson is a member of the medical council of 34 physicians selected from the whole country which acts in an advisory capacity to the Veterans' Administration.
