Tucker As Coach

Gerald Tucker, Oklahoma's All-American basketball center of 1943 who still has two years of competition with the Sooners, has turned out to be quite a basketball coach in his maiden season.

Tucker's 41st Division basketball team has just won the championship of the Pacific Army Olympics.

Whether the 41st's success is due to Tucker the coach or Tucker the player is any man's guess. The big Sooner center played as well as tutored and his presence on the floor certainly didn't handicap his team.

Tucker has kept Coach Drake of Oklahoma well-posted by air mail on the strategy of all his games, writing from Japan, Korea, the Philippines, and wherever his team's travels have taken him.

"We flew to Manila in a C-46 to play a team from Hawaii for the championship," Tucker wrote Drake. "We worked out for a week, then played our first game. We won 53-52 after leading 32-19 at the half—almost handed the game to them. We knew how to best them in the second game which we won 64-49.

"Hope your season is turning out okay," was Coach Tucker's closing remark to Coach Drake.

"All that boy needs is a little more self-confidence," laughed Drake.
