IMA Reorganizes

A few weeks before the commencement of the 1946-1947 school year, a very important election took place in the Engineering Auditorium. At this meeting three men were elected for the final appointment to the office of secretary for the independent men of O.U. campus.

On September 1, 1946, the new I.M.A. secretary took office and began a plan of organization and to carry on the ideals and achievements of the original group who first began the I.M.A. The other officers who took office at the same time were a vice-president, secretary, treasurer, social chairman, athletic chairman, scholastic chairman, inter-campus alliance chairman, publicity chairman, and a special officer to help in providing a well-rounded social program for the men and women of O.U. who have been disabled in some way.

The purpose of the I.M.A. as originally outlined by the founders back in 1934 involved four main divisions. The first objective was to provide a means for representation of independent men in intra-mural athletics; the second was in the form of a well-balanced social program for independent men, and the fourth was to help independent men to become acquainted with alumni and faculty members of the University.

It is well to remember that our University was the first school to foster such a movement among independent men under the supervision of Dean Findlay. Now many schools throughout the country are strongly represented in the national society of independent men and women.

The first national convention for the nation's Independent Men's Association was held in the spring of 1938 here at Oklahoma University. We held the national charter for a few years after which it went to Purdue University. At present the national charter is held by Texas University, Austin, Texas.

The original I.M.A. program on O.U. campus called for seven districts but with the ever increasing student body the number of districts has been increased to 21 districts. Each district works independently of the main headquarters, and each councilman from the district is responsible for promoting the interests of all independent members.

The first I.M.A. social function was held on October 19 in the National Guard Armory in Norman. A very spirited election was held during the week for an I.M.A. Girl of the Year. Over 700 votes were cast during the election, and the night of the big I.M.A. Dads' Day Dance a crown was placed on the fair hair of the first I.M.A. Girl of the Year, Miss Danny Miller. Other attractions of the dance was the all I.M.A. band which was newly organized and had gained wide prestige in less than a month's time.

To take care of the many varied functions of the I.M.A. the following committees were organized to see that nothing was left undone. After a month of concerted efforts by the various officers, great strides had been taken to provide a program for the independent men.

Gene Sheid, social chairman, with a committee of five men has arranged the date bureau to take care of any independent men desiring companionship with other independent girls. Future social functions are already on the planning board. Some of these include steak roasts, swim fests, song fests, hay rides, dance lessons, and many other interesting features.

Dick Witten, athletic chairman, has taken over the reins in the intra-mural sports, and the districts have all entered various teams to participate in the many sports offered by the intra-mural department. A committee of five men aid Dick in seeing that each district goes on and on with the goal of victory at every game.

Marvin Hambrick, scholastic chairman, who is in charge of promoting a program to induce independent members to strive for better grade averages; to help one another in tutorial service, and to bring a better understanding between the student and his faculty members. Special awards are to be made for the highest grade averages during the semester.

Floyd Johnston, inter-campus chairman, heads one of the most important offices. With a committee of five, Floyd's task is to strive for better understanding between the I.M.A. and other campus organizations. Their problems become the problems of the I.M.A., and with a generous supply of patience and co-operative assistance Floyd has begun a program of helping other groups on the campus as well as other schools.

Dick Ratliff, publicity chairman, has done a commendable job in the journalistic department of the I.M.A. When the organization is in need of first rate publicity in the city papers or the school paper, the I.M.A. calls to Dick to print the facts.

H. B. Frank, chairman of the special committee, has been busy giving of his time and effort, and is bringing the benefits of the I.M.A. to those who are handicapped in some way. His call goes out to all of those who wish to join the throng of I.M.A. members, especially to those who like H.B. have some physical handicap. It is said around the campus circles that H. B. carries with him the most pleasing and most friendly smile that anyone can find. Yes, even with a physical handicap of his own. But if you are ever feeling low sometime just find H. B., and you seem to pop right out of your self pity, because H. B. is glowing with understanding for your troubles.

Making plans for the return of the I.M.A. national charter to O.U. are the Sooner chapter's prexy, Hugo Dallas (seated), Dover, Ohio, senior in business administration; Secretary Wayne Hubbard (left), Oklahoma City, junior in business administration, and Harold Shafer (right), Muskogee, senior in business administration. The national charter is now held by the I.M.A. at the University of Texas.

Sooners Take Flu Precautions

An all out campaign for the prevention of an influenza epidemic in the University has been started by the Student Health Service. Dr. James O. Head, director of the service, announced recently.

The entire campaign is centered around the new influenza vaccine which is being offered to all faculty members, students and their families. The new vaccine, which was made available to the public only last year after being developed by the Army, is administered in a single dose in the form of a shot.

A fee of 75 cents is charged for this service. This fee is merely to cover the expense of the vaccine and the extra trouble involved in the administering of the shots to several thousand students.
