The housing shortage along with the "no room to let" signs that adorn the hotel lobbies and desks throughout America had no effect on a number of enterprising Sooner Alumni of Miami, Oklahoma, when it came to making the annual trek to Dallas to see the Longhorn-Sooner football game this last month. These Miami, Oklahoma, alums merely chartered a pullman, tied it on to a train headed Dallas way, and proceeded to live in the pullman the two days and nights they were in Dallas. Harris, '29law, who is now back in Oklahoma City, was the Judge Advocate prosecuting for General Eisenhower the famous European case wherein the network of the black market was broken. These O.U. legal grads have gone far in their work! Major Grantham's letter reads as follows:

"Berlin, Germany

"It has been a long time since I wrote to or heard from you. However, I have often heard from you indirectly through others.

"Recently I had a letter from Eudean, telling me how happy she was about her job in the speech department at Tulsa University. She also spoke of you in the letter. She, like most of us from O.U., thinks a lot of you.

"At the present time I am engaged in the prosecution of some rather big black market cases. I started these cases as soon as I had finished the prosecution of WAC Captain Durant in the Kronberg Jewel Case.

"Ted, please have the Sooner Magazine started to me, and let me know what the annual dues are for the Association, and I shall send the money.

"There is considerable talk among the officers here about the O.U. football team. It looks good. "Give my regards to everyone."

"Nordholz Under the Sea."

"Dear Mr. Beard:

"You probably remember my being in your office last August. I was on my way to Germany then and I finally got here in the middle of September. After being shuttled up and down Germany I finally lit here at Nordholz Air base with a Fighter Group. I was here only one day when I was told that Air Force Headquarters was pulling me out again. Today, three weeks later, I got my orders to report to a Negro Signal Battalion at Roth, Germany, near Nurnberg.

"This place Nordholz is without a doubt the Siberia of the E.T.O., the salt mines of the A.A.F. Half way between Bremmerhaven and Cuxhaven on the North Sea, it is a place to drive a man to drink, if there was anything to drink. The sun came out today and the base held an orientation lecture to bring some of the old timers up to date on what it was. The fog is so bad that you can frequently hear ducks and geese swimming about in the tree tops. A big sea plane came in the other day and made a landing a thousand feet above the field. We sent a sub up to fetch the crew to the mess hall.

"Well that's that for now. My new address appears on the envelope, will you see that Mrs. Mary Turnbull gets it so that she can start my copies of the 'Sooner' this way? We decided to delay mailing any of them until I got a permanent station.

Yours,

Maj. Gerald W. Shivers, '40, Signal Corps."
