Wise and Otherwise by Wheeler Mayo in the Sequoyah County Times, Sallisaw, Oklahoma immediately following the annual Sooner-Aggie football struggle brought to light another struggle between two prominent alumni, one an O. U. Sooner and the other an Oklahoma Aggie.

Here is the Ed's report:

"I thought that when Sam Pointer gave 50 points on the O. U.-Texas football game that he would hold the record for optimism and would take the cake for having "more faith than judgment," but low and behold, last Saturday as I was leaving the Aggie stadium in Stillwater after the A. and M.—O. U. game, I ran into Ray Parr, O. U. Sooner, waving a twenty dollar bill under "Aggie" Lloyd Benefield's nose. Ray had given Lloyd 59 points and had just collected his bet and was he happy or maybe it would be better to say, "Was Lloyd unhappy?" I told Parr, who is a reporter on the Daily Oklahoman, that I thought that Mr. Gaylord, his publisher, had him on the wrong desk, that where he should be was on sports, because any man that could prophesy the score of 73 to 12 for O. U. and back it up with a bet, was a "prophesier" without a peer."

University A.W.S.—

with original designs by University art students is an annual feature.

Continuing an emphasis on orientation, promotion of activities and scholarship, A.W.S. has put in student hands some functions which formerly were performed by University officials.

Acclimating the freshman to college life is now handled by an A.W.S. committee. The orientation program has stressed the personal touch by seeing to it that each new co-ed has one upperclassman, her own co-ed counselor, interested in her welfare.

A course in marriage relations for co-eds was introduced and sponsored as an A.W.S. special project. This year University officials adopted the course as a regular part of the curriculum and it is now offered to both men and women students.

Realizing that worthwhile extra-curricular activities are a vital part of college life, A.W.S. has assumed the task of acquainting the new students with campus clubs and their aims. An annual Activities Festival with representative booths from all organizations is held under the sponsorship of the association.

Voluntary service through A.W.S. to the University and to all students comes under another committee's supervision. Special activities during the war were carried out by the War Council. This has now been succeeded by the service group which takes charge of money-raising drives for worthy national funds and of student hospitality for campus visitors.

Governing themselves through the Association of Women Students is teaching O. U.'s co-eds to become active citizens of the University—and of the nation.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Davis are the parents of a son born January 21 in a Muskogee hospital. Davis completed work on his degree in journalism at the University in January.
