

An Important Grid Date--Sept. 29, 1951

When the Texas football team comes to Owen Field here in 1951 to start a home-and-home series that will replace the present Dallas contract which still has three years to run, it will mark the first time in 29 years the Longhorns have played on Oklahoma soil.

In 35 of the previous 41 games, Sooner teams have played south of Red River. Texas has won 28 games, Oklahoma 11 and two were tied. Excellent Steer teams coached by Dana Bible and Blair Cherry have now measured Sooner aggregations eight years in a row.

Bringing the game to Norman on alternate years, however, won't assure a Sooner victory. Of the six Texas-Oklahoma games played in Oklahoma, Texas won four. In 1901 they defeated Oklahoma 11-0 at Norman, in 1903 they won 11-5 at Oklahoma City, in 1906 they won 10-9 at Oklahoma City and in 1922 they won 32-7 at Norman. The Sooners won 2-0 at Oklahoma City in 1905 and 50-0 at Norman in 1908, record score of the series.

Tom Stidham has been the most successful Sooner coach against Texas teams. Stidham's red-panted

Sooner Powerhouses won 13-0 in 1938 and 24-12 in 1939, tied 7-7 in 1937 and lost 16-19 in 1940 although leading 16-7 at one point in the game.

Bennie Owen had a .500 percentage against Texas, winning eight and losing eight of 16 games, 12 of them played in Texas, four in Oklahoma.

With the Cotton Bowl's seating capacity scheduled to be increased 15,000 by this fall, the 1948, 1949 and 1950 Texas-Oklahoma games will be played before 62,000 at Dallas. The contract has been extended four years beyond the Dallas contract and here are the dates: September 29, 1951 at Norman, September 27, 1952 at Austin, September 26, 1953 at Norman and September 25, 1954 at Austin.

President George Cross of Oklahoma has stipulated, in agreement with Texas officials, that a continuation of the series is contingent upon good crowd behavior. The pop bottle-heaving episode of last fall is the only public demonstration ever to becloud the 48-year old rivalry. Relations between the rival players and student bodies have always been fine.

O.U. Cage Tilts Aired by WNAD

Basketball games at the University field house will be broadcast in February as they were last month by Jack Payne, WNAD sportscaster. The Sooners' five remaining home tilts, including the final two in March, also will be brought to radio listeners by Curt Gowdy of KOMA, Oklahoma City.

JACK PAYNE

Payne, junior from Okemah, handled last year's basketball and football broadcasts. He'll report action in the Nebraska game February 9; Kansas, February 21 and the Oklahoma Aggie tilt February 24.

It is expected that WNAD will request permission from the Federal Communications Commission to carry broadcasts of the two March games in Norman—Missouri, March 5, and Kansas State, March 8.

The Sipuel Case

As the magazine goes to press the case seems far from solved. As a matter of fact it is further complicated by the application of six more Negroes to various schools at the University. Applications were received from them for higher education in architectural engineering, business administration, education and biology.

The University Board of Regents tossed the hot potato into the lap of Mac Q. Williamson, state attorney general, after he had said "the Board of Regents would be justified in declining the admission at this time of the six."

In holding that the regents would be justified in declining the admission, Williamson had said circumstances were not the same as in the Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher case in which immediate action was directed. She had filed for admission two years before. The other six filed during regular enrollment, thus the state has had no time to make facilities available.

After an all-day session on January 29, the University Regents adopted a resolution asking "Williamson to state specifically whether the Regents may lawfully admit qualified Negroes when other facilities for Negroes are not available in the state. The board further directed President Cross to follow the opinion and to admit Negroes to the University if the attorney general answers yes and to deny admission if the attorney general answers no.

Dr. Cross was told to defer action on all applications made by Negroes until the opinion is received.

The latest development in The Sipuel Case was a statement by Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson that Negroes may not lawfully be admitted to the University at this time. Under orders from the Regents, President Cross must deny enrollment applications made by six Negroes January 28.

On the day the Regents met, a mass meeting was called in front of the Administration Building by a group of students to advocate throwing the University doors open to would-be Negro students. Howard Friedman, government senior from Oklahoma City and spokesman for the group, urged contributions to the NAACP to help finance their fight. He also urged letters to be sent to the Regents demanding admission of Negroes.

In declaring that the fourteenth amendment was dead in the state because of failure of Oklahoma to recognize it, Jack Bales, arts and science sophomore, set fire to a copy of it held by Wanda Lou Howard, arts and sciences junior. Then, singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," approximately 350 students marched to the campus corner post office where the "remains" of the fourteenth amendment were mailed to President Truman.

Anti-Negro elements struck back the following day with a mass meeting also in front of the Administration Building. This meeting was organized by Stanley D. Smith, Norman Arts and Sciences Senior, and George Rainey, Maud Arts and Sciences Senior.

Orators for both sides argued the issue over the "mike." Cries of "Heil Hitler," "That's tellin' 'em Bilbo," "You sho' said a mouf full white chile," and other such heckling were common.

Most speakers for those opposing admission of Negroes at O.U. were in favor of equal education to be provided in state Negro institutions.

On the third day still another demonstration was held on the icy steps of the Administration Building—this time to ridicule and point out the futility of all demonstrations. This one advocated "Equality for the Irish."

Master of ceremonies Clee Fitzgerald, Caddo law freshman, introduced the speakers to an audience of perhaps 100 students, most of whom wore green arm bands. Ferrill (O') Roger, Stillwater law senior, and Tom (O'Shanter) Brett, Ardmore law senior, amused the audience with their pleas for recognition in Oklahoma of the "Railroad Act of 1872 which assured Irishmen of certain rights in laying railroad ties." A copy of the "act" was burned and mailed to the head janitor of the Union Building to be disposed of "as he sees fit."

Fort Sill was established in 1869 as the base of operations against the Plains Indians.

Letters from 'Bud'

For paid-up members of the University of Oklahoma Alumni Association only.

Such was the football letter prepared by Sooner Coach "Bud" Wilkinson every week. Following each of the Saturday grid contests, "Bud" went to work on his communique to O.U. alumni—that is, to those who had paid their Association dues.

In his four-page letter, the popular coach—who piloted the Sooners to seven victories, one tie and a Big Six Conference co-championship in ten games—pointed out errors of the Saturday before, patted players on the back, gave the team statistics and individual running figures, before giving his readers an idea of what to expect the following weekend.

THREE "R'S" PLUS RELIGION

Although not required, religion is one of the "R's" on the schedule for most University of Oklahoma students. Thirty denominations are represented in the student body of more than 12,000 students, it has been announced by Ted Ledeen, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. Hundreds of students take part in the programs of Norman churches and the Student Christian Associations.

Dr. George L. Cross, University of Oklahoma president, is a member of the board of trustees of the Southern Association of Science and Industry.
