Here's Facts Aplenty

Information on the moon or a new law—Oklahomans can obtain the facts from the public information service at the University. The division has material covering 60,000 subjects which is available to any interested person or group.

Folders containing magazine and newspaper articles or pamphlets dealing with the needed subject matter will be sent upon request. Figures compiled by workers show that 50 per cent of the requests come from state teachers.

Dr. Gaston Litton, University archivist, is studying the contributions the Chickasaws have made to the current life of the state and nation.

Dr. J. E. Fellows, dean of admissions and records at the University, is president of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.
