Delegates Attend Short Course

The world's largest short course on gas measurement and regulation was held at the University April 9-12. The course attracted over 800 delegates.

The purpose of the course was to bring the men of the industry together to study problems in measurements and regulations of gas. The gassers attended 14 sessions which covered everything from plain meters to measurements for gas efficiency.

Many nationally known gas associations have lent their support to the short course. Included among backers are American Gas Association, Natural Gasoline Association of America and Southern Gas Association.
