O.U. Lost to Aggies

20 Years Ago

Never let it be said the University won't admit defeat—and likewise pay for it. According to the annals of history (past editions of the Sooner Magazine), the Oklahoma Alumni Association accepted a challenge from the Oklahoma A. and M. Student's Association to a membership campaign. The terms stipulated that the association securing the most members within a specified four-month period would win a trophy and dinner from the loser. Fate intervened—at the expense of the local group. The bet was paid in full with members of the two alumni boards of directors present for the occasion.

Ye o' spirit, allegedly dead since the advent of World War I, returned to the campus during the 1930 football season. A plan was evolved in which a section of 1,200 seats was reserved for University "rooters" directly on the 50-yard line at Owen Field. One might ascertain after witnessing a more recent tussle on the campus, that the sporting spirit is not limited to those 1,200 seats.

The University chapter of Kappa Alpha fraternity celebrated its 25th anniversary on the local campus in October, 1930. The "Southern Gentlemen"—some 250 strong—were expected to return for the gala affair.

Another "first" in University history was A. Clarence Smith, '32ma, who was the initial candidate to apply for graduate work in the O.U. school of journalism. He was appointed graduate assistant and had editorial supervision over the Oklahoma Daily. Smith is now residing in Lamesa, Texas.

Texas Game Big Day

15 Years Ago

An increased enrolment of some 5,500 students was estimated for the fall semester—quite a comparison to this fall's estimated enrolment of 9,000. . . . Of the 88 lawyers who passed the bar examination during the summer, 63 were former University students. Only seven of the latter group were not graduated from the University law school. Leslie Pain, '35ba, '35 Law, (who is practicing law in Chickasha) made the highest grade on the examination. . . . The Whirlwind, campus humor magazine, was supplanted by The Covered Wagon whose constructors set it up as a journal for "articles, stories and humor along safer and saner lines." No comment.

And from the October, 1935 Sooner Magazine: "The annual Migration Day Oklahoma-Texas football game at Dallas promises to be one of the most colorful in history. Some 2,000 students and 4,000 alumni are expected in Dallas for the game which is an annual feature of the Texas State Fair." Proof positive that time does not change everything.

A Mind of Her Own

10 Years Ago

University co-eds had minds of their own. The story is told of the Norman young lady who decided she had probably missed something by not going away to school where she would be a little more "independent." The comely lassie persuaded her mother to rent her room at their home to other students while she in turn rented a room in a student rooming house.

University sports fans were undoubtedly more than just a little relieved that year when the highways leading to and from Norman were reconstructed, making them in better condition than ever before. Highway 9 from Norman southwest to Chickasha wasn't in first class condition, though. Until a new bridge was built over the Canadian River, automobile traffic was forced to ford the river which it was able to do except when the Canadian took a sudden rise.

True Love Hits Rough Stretch

One former University student, Collis Parker, '50bs, and his lovely young wife, the former Eunice Frost, will readily agree that true love never runs smooth.

Engaged some ten months ago, the Oklahoma City couple planned their wedding for the day following Parker's graduation from the University. It was to have been a "small family wedding" at the Oklahoma City First Baptist Church on Tuesday evening, August 8.

But for one hour that evening, the couple had their doubts that the ceremony would ever take place, because:

ONE—The church parlor, traditionally decorated for the occasion, turned out to be securely locked. And while the caretaker traveled unwittingly to another part of the state with the keys in his pocket, the best man exerted his best efforts to take the door off its hinges.

TWO—The minister didn't show up. He thought the ceremony was to take place at 6:30 rather than at 6:00 as was scheduled.

THREE—The groom forgot the license and had to drive home to get it.

FOUR—The best man blew a fuse in the dark church auditorium so it couldn't substitute for the parlor after all.

FIVE—The happy couple, finally united in wedlock, forgot their suitcase and returned home for it in a sheepish anti-climax after a grand exit.

Finally, after much delay, the couple did leave for Colorado for their honeymoon.

Accident Nets Document

An Oklahoma pioneer's autobiography accidentally has become a historical document in the University's archives.

Dr. Carl C. Rister, University historian, has copied an original manuscript written in long-hand by the late Harry Parker of Beaver County and intended for his children and grandchildren.

Parker described a pioneer's life in Oklahoma and gave detailed accounts of early-day hardships. He also discussed political measures of the day and farming methods in "No-Man's Land."

Military Law on Tap

Keeping up with world events, the University Law School is offering a course in military justice for the first time this fall. The course includes instruction in the articles of war, trial procedures of military courts and rules of evidence. Students will also study unification of military law in all branches of service.

Dr. R. Dale Vliet, '38Law, a major in the military police courts during World War II, will teach the course.
