Basketball Holds Spotlight

25 Years Ago

Sooner spotlight was on the University basketball team in 1925. Making a clean sweep of the first six games of the schedule, by January the squad stood at the head of the Missouri Valley Conference with eight wins and one loss. Tagged as the most likely candidate to take championship honors, the team was coached by Hugh McDermott, '20ba, now chairman of the physical education department for men.

The campus was the scene of much building and renovation—not unlike present conditions. The University's Stadium-Union building fund campaign was underway and had received pledges from some 5000 alumni, students, faculty members and friends—netting an amount of $636,596—of which $91,408 had been paid in at that time. An added seating capacity of from 15,481 to 52,000 was included in the stadium plans while the union plans called for construction to take place on the plot occupied at that time by the old gymnasium.

Oklahomans—and former students—were scattered over the nation in various occupational and professional haunts. Dr. Clarence B. Sullivan, '20bs, '22med (now a resident physician at Carnegie Hospital, Carnegie), was practicing medicine in Tioga, Louisiana. William A. Blakely, '24bs, was teaching in Legion, Texas. ## Queens Could Lose Thrones 15 Years Ago

Engineering students in 1936 amended their constitution to the effect that future queens of the organization kidnapped by the rival lawyer's organization would forfeit their rights to the St. Pat's Day throne. According to Lawrence Brock, '36 eng, Tulsa, at that time president of the organization, whenever a queen was "snatched," she no longer held the crown. Women students in engineering weren't eligible to compete for the queenship.

Books Abroad, international clearing house of literature, began its tenth year of continuous publication with the January, 1936 issue. The quarterly volume, published by the University of Oklahoma Press, was reported to hold the distinction of being better known abroad than in this country. Another mark in the progress of the University, it was established in 1927 by Dr. Roy Temple House, long-time dean of the University foreign language department. Dr. House is now editor emeritus of the publication and a David Ross Boyd professor emeritus of modern languages. E. E. ## Sooner Portraits . . .

Following graduation from the University he joined the family bank in Clinton as assistant cashier. In 1941 he joined the National Bank Examiners' force. Although he considered it an excellent experience, commercial banking was what really interested Arch. So he went to Wichita, Kansas, in 1943 as cashier of the Southwestern National Bank. In 1945 he moved to the Union National Bank in Kansas City, Missouri. And in 1947 he was elected vice president of the Union Bank, becoming one of the youngest men in the country to hold a senior officer position in a large metropolitan bank.

Arch Wheeler likes people and he has a tremendous amount of energy which he directs toward promoting a better relationship between bankers and their customers. Since becoming head of the correspondent banking department of the Kansas City Bank, he has been busy calling on bankers and commercial customers throughout the southwest. This broad acquaintance has been another of the reasons why he has held many important positions in the city and state banking associations.

In 1943 he was married to the former Lucille Akers, '38bs. They make their home in Kansas City.

Arch is making plans for a large Kansas City Alumni luncheon this spring. He was informed by his predecessor, Richard T. (Dick) Pendleton, '26Law, that if the Sooners didn't have a football team during the 1950 season, he would be able to serve the luncheon on a bridge table. If football scores will raise the Sooner Alumni spirit, Arch may have to reserve Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium.
