St. Pat and his engineers are noted for their fondness of having things come out right. One O. U. engineer Willard E. Edwards, '29e.eng, decided to make the calendar come out right.

When he was in highschool around 1918-1919, the subject of the calendar changes of the Roman Caesars came up in Latin class. Edwards asked the teacher if she didn't think the present arrangement was confusing.

"She apparently misunderstood my intention," Edwards said, and answered rather tartly: "Do you think you can make a better one?" I was embarrassed, the class laughed, and I sat down without replying. However, her challenge had piqued me, and that night I was more interested in the possibility of devising a better calendar than I was in Latin grammar."

On toying with the calendar, Edwards designed several calendar plans. He finally set up a calendar with four quarters of 91 days each which allowed for 13 weeks in each quarter. The four quarters are identical and by setting one day aside each two quarters the calendar becomes fixed and perpetual.

The calendar he designed when 16 has been proclaimed as easier to use and more practical than the world calendar, and hundreds of years overdue. A year ago Joseph R. Farrington, delegate from Hawaii to the House of Representatives, proposed a bill that Congress adopt Edwards' calendar on New Year's Day, 1956.

Edwards when not answering inquiries concerning his "perpetual Calendar" is an electrical engineer in Honolulu.

Lt. Comdr. Willard E. Edwards, '29e.eng, training officer, Volunteer Electronics Company, 14-1, Bishops Point, Oahu, T. H., instructs an electronics class at USNR radio station NSZ. His perpetual calendar has received world-wide recognition.

Paul A. Walker, '12law, was named by President Truman in late February to the chairmanship of the Federal Communications Commission.

One of the original members of the commission, Walker has previously served that bureau as a board member, acting chairman and vice-chairman. Determination to make the most of his opportunities raised Walker to the eminent position he now holds. He numbers his friends in Oklahoma and the southwest by the hundreds. He is the sort of person who loves to perform service for the benefit of the people, and the record he has established as a public servant attests to the character of the man.

Walker experienced his share of struggles common to youth when he started out. In 1905 he was a highschool principal in Shawnee. Setting his sights on becoming a lawyer he enrolled at the University in 1909. A law degree was only part of what Walker obtained from the University. In 1914 he married Miss Myra Evalyn Williams, foreign language teacher at O. U. For three years he was an instructor at the University.

When his law course was finished he joined the State Corporation Commission and eventually was made chairman of the board. From the corporation commissions of Oklahoma, he was drafted by the Federal Communications Commission in 1934 and made chairman of the telephone and telegraph division. In that capacity he caused a reduction in A. T. & T. rates of $12,000,000.

Walker is past president of the Alumni Association, was chairman of the student committee that conducted the campaign in the state legislature for an appropriation for the Law Building and was alumni speaker at the dedication of the building. He was named to Oklahoma's Hall of Fame in 1945.
