of J. W. Mashburn, Olympic team member, who was declared ineligible because of grades. Without Mashburn, the team managed a fine second place showing and in the doing broke two conference marks. Still to be decided before the winner of the all-sports competition will be known are the Spring sports—outdoor track, baseball, tennis and golf.

Regardless of the outcome, Oklahoma is showing once again the fine balance of her athletic program.

Attempting to keep the same balance another year, Bud Wilkinson and his staff are looking over the prospects for another year's football team. Spring training opened with first workouts March 4.

Replacements must be found for Billy Vessels, Eddie Crowder, Buck McPhail and Tom Catlin plus other graduating seniors, if the team is to offer serious opposition to Notre Dame, Texas, Pittsburg, Kansas, etc., next fall.

With the abolishment of football specialists, following the NCAA's substitution rule change, the players will be playing both offensively and defensively next fall. Spring training closes with the annual Alumni-Varsity game April 11.

As spring drills opened, the coaching staff was without the services of Dee Andros, '50ed, assistant line coach who accepted an assistant coaching position with the University of Kansas.

It appeared that Gomer Jones, line coach and assistant athletic director, might leave the University in early February, also. He was interviewed for the head coaching position with Southern Methodist University. The uncertainty was put to rest when SMU named another coach to fill the vacancy.
