Did You Say That!

Quips and Quotes that indicate what alumni are thinking and saying. Observations that don't make the papers.

"... I sat alone in my apartment yesterday and listened intently to the O.U.-Notre Dame game and wished I could be there watching it. . . I don't know who broadcast from the Press Box on our station back here . . . but you should have heard him—here are a few things he said. . .

"If none of you have ever been out here to see an O.U. game you have no idea what you have missed. . . Today is claimed a state-wide holiday and the Governor has arranged for TVs in all places possible in Oklahoma City and the farmers from the surrounding territory, I am told, have come to town with the whole family, driven in, imagine, to see 'their' boys play. . . Not only am I amazed at the enthusiasm among the students but the grown folks as well. This stadium would make anyone's eyes pop out. . . You have never seen such a Press Box. It is something out of this world. . . I would wager that it is the best in the world. . . If you never do anything else in these United States you should come out here to this school and see them put on a football game."

"I must say that O.U. couldn't have got better publicity if they had paid for it. I sat here and my chest just blew up because I was so proud that I was an Okie. These Easterners should start seeing some of their own country before going to Europe and don't think I don't tell them. . ."—Mrs. Elizabeth Parker Bascom, '22-'24, Washington, D. C.

"... This is undoubtedly the greatest city in the world; I've only been here a week now but already feel as if I've lived here for months. In spite of my fractured French, I've had no trouble getting anywhere I've wanted to go or anything I've wanted to eat. The city is clean and very beautiful, and the people are as friendly and polite as could be imagined. . .

"Prices are one of the greatest things about Paris. You can make your living standard whatever you wish, and students can get by comfortably on a relatively low one. In the right cafes in the Latin quarter you can get a steak dinner with wine and all the trimmings for the equivalent of about 50 or 60 cents. Of course, in the regular tourist haunts, prices are astronomical—it didn't take any of us long to learn to avoid them. . ."—From a letter by Fulbright Scholar Bill Spohrer, '53journ. Paris was an orientation stop for him while he prepared for his studies at the University of Grenoble, Grenoble, France.

"Life has been hectic during my five months in Chicago. Have just moved to my third 'home' in this city of pork and poetry and hope that this one will prove satisfactory. . . I often wish I had stayed in my adopted state of Oklahoma instead of wandering back here to my home state of Illinois. Just to keep the spirit of Oklahoma alive I shall go to see Oklahoma! again when it opens here in a few days. . ."—Doris McCarty Roberts, '50ed, public relations counsel for Midwest Associates, Chicago, Illinois.

"Donald Royse and I go quail hunting together. He's a fine hunter. He goes just far enough to eat an apple and then says, 'Well, I guess there's no quail here.'"—Carl Rizley, '48Law, Sayre attorney on the subject of hunting with Donald Royse, '35Law, Elk City attorney.

"I was sure disappointed in the restaurants of Dallas. I couldn't find vayas on any of their menus."—Bill Boren, '50, Shawnee, steadfastly refusing to accept an explanation that the current hit song "Vaya Con Dios" was in no way comparable to "chile con carne" in translation.

O.U. and the Orient

The author took several O.U. students on a trip to the Orient during the summer. Alumni helped make it possible, he says.

Director, Institute of Asiatic Affairs

"Oklahoma" and "Asia" should go together like tart lemon and sweet milk. At least that's the usual approach. Actually, because of the 45th Division and the numerous Sooner alumni now resident in the Far East, there is no more strangeness in using the two expressions in one sentence. Thousands of Sooners have been there—and scores are there now.

These alumni have contributed worthily to the development of the programs of the Institute of Asiatic Affairs at the University of Oklahoma.

The first project involved the building of a reservoir of literature and artifacts at Norman that could subsequently be used on research projects.

Toward this project Sooners throughout Asia sent material from Japan, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaya, China, and India. Guy P. Webb, '24ba, alone sent over one hundred books on Japanese culture. Jack L. Manning, '30ba, sent and is continuing to send the Philippine daily newspaper Manila Bulletin. Others have contributed to the Institute of Asiatic Affairs' weekly broadcast, Orient in the News.

The Institute's program of 1953 involved a trip by University of Oklahoma students to Asia. The only way to activate this project on the limited budget available was by calling on O.U. alumni now located in the Far East, and through a generous contribution on the part of H. C. Price, Sr., of Bartlesville.

The three-month, 25,000 mile trip was an adventure in understanding. Feeling that Americans in Asia, whether tourists, business men, or governmental officials, did not always represent the American spirit, nor could they rightly interpret the rhythm of native life to us, we determined to go to these lands, live in the homes of the nationals, and work as they worked without contact with the Western world.

Contacting O.U. graduates in Asia long before starting on our voyage, we asked them to make all necessary arrangements for our stays in the various countries visited.

The alumni responded nobly. In Japan it was Gary Sibeck, '51ba, who

Two Game Guys . . .

at halfback (1950). But Carroll never got to play. When the Communists invaded South Korea, Carroll was called to duty with the Oklahoma National Guard and spent the next two years in the swamps of Louisiana and later overseas in Japan and Korea.

"I didn't do any running in Korea," Carroll explained. "I was a sergeant in a communications company and rode everywhere in a jeep. We were an all-vehicle outfit."

"When he returned to Norman just before the 1952 season began, Carroll was soft. He had missed spring practice. His legs were gone. He played only a few minutes as a sub, carrying the ball twice for a total of seven yards.

"Disappointed, he went to work trying to regain that speed. All winter long he reported to Track Coach John Jacobs, ('16 ba) who poured him over the hurdles and down the dash lanes. During spring practice, he ran the stadium hundreds of times. All summer he came home from working as a roustabout in the oil fields and did striding and sprinting in the heat.

"His perseverance paid off Saturday."

Neither story is complete. Ging's determination may pay off once more and he may strengthen the team before the season is done. Carroll's story is just the beginning. With another year's eligibility remaining, he looks like a rising star.

And while two of its individual players were writing compelling stories, the team was giving every appearance of moving towards yet another Big Seven crown.
