

JOAN FINKENBINDER and J. D. Northcutt entertained with Western songs, another high spot of Scandals. Were billed as "Jude and Joanne."

RESIDENTIAL HALL'S "Caesar for a Day" skit took good-natured pot-shots at administration, featuring Crossius Caesar and MacMinnius.

KAPPA ALPHA THETAS Jeannie Warren, Ann Cullen, Mary Blanton pan women's suffrage in skit, "The Continual Fights—Women's Rights."

The Fabulous Scandals

Now-or-Never week, highlighted by Sooner Scandals, and the purchase of new housing facilities headlined the campus news.

The quiet of O.U.'s dating system was disrupted last month with an explosion comparable to a burst fire plug on a peaceful Sunday morning. It was "Now or Never Week," the school's annual tribute to what college men have to go through to socialize with the gals.

For seven days—many added the word, glorious—it was the gal who had to call the guy and the gal who had to hold the door and the gal who had to provide the transportation and the gal who had to pay the check.

Besides giving the boys a break they could appreciate, it also opened a key-hole to many finding exactly what their feminine friends thought of them. If that special girl a boy had been dating consistently didn't ask him for a now-or-never date, he would get a pretty good idea that he had had it, and that the gal was just riding either his car or his pocketbook on toward greener hunting grounds.

Anyway, just about everyone, whether it turned out bad or good or middlin,' was glad it was over and that things could settle back to normalcy.

Not glad to see gone by on the calendar was the annual Sooner Scandals, March 11 and 12. Under the direction of Joe Remak-lus, fine arts junior from Pauls Valley, the show was heralded as one of the best staged in the long line of Scandals. It was fast-paced, bright and was filled out with most of the ingredients for a success, girls, dancing, music and an ample stock of humor.

On the more serious side, the University announced that it had arranged for the purchase of Park View Apartments two blocks east of Campus for a reported $1,135,000 from the Federal Housing Administration. The 244 units that will be available next year to students consist of modern one- and two-bedroom apartments, hailed by many students as a vast improvement over Sooner City.

President Cross announced shortly after the news came out that his recommendation to the Board of Regents would call for permitting those married couples now living in Sooner City who so desired to remain there. "We need to look after the students," he said. The University has authorized sale of 179 units in Sooner City out of the 500 total.

Of 95 Sooner City residents interviewed by the Oklahoma Daily, 36 opposed, 31 favored and 19 (most of whom were graduating seniors) had no views on the prospects of forsaking the prefabs for Parkview.
