... Alumni Representatives with Successful Careers

During its annual three-day Career Conference, which started March 2, the University welcomed back to campus several alumni speakers who are making particular contributions in their fields.

Numbered among the alumni speakers were Bryce M. Harlow, administrative assistant to President Eisenhower; C. E. Reistle Jr., member of the board of directors of Humble Oil Co. in charge of the production department, and Bobba Ice Paul, New York fashion designer. They spoke at conference sessions, informing college and high school students about their work and offering suggestions for success.
