GOLDEN DAYS—There's no mistaking the confidence with which these racket wielding Sooners face Roy E. Heffner's camera. The time should be the early '30s, and undoubtedly these fellows were known for their tennis triumphs. Drop us a line if you know their names. (See next page.)

Sooner readers had no trouble whatsoever in identifying the martial three in the November Heffner photograph as Tom Brett, Lowell D. Gregory and Kenneth L. Kraettli. The trio were the end men in a shot of the junior military science students which appeared in the 1938 yearbook.

Tom Brett, a native of Norman, is now state director of the Oklahoma Civil Defense Agency. Brett took his business degree in 1940 before entering the service in July, 1940, for six years active duty which included landing in Normandy the day following D-day. He entered the O.U. College of Law in 1946, completing his degree in 1948. Brett had been practicing in Norman for two years when he was recalled with the 45th Division of the Oklahoma National Guard and sent to Korea.

Mrs. Brett is the former Ida Maude Emerye, '40h.ec. She was assistant manager of the Oklahoma Memorial Union cafeteria before her marriage in 1946. The Bretts have two children, Marsha, 6, and Bill, 4.

Center man Lowell D. Gregory, '40ba, '50ma, is also a World War II veteran, serving first with the 9th Field Artillery, then with the Air Transport Command out of Casablanca. Gregory's bachelor's degree was in English, but he returned to O.U. to get his master's in mathematics. A resident of Arlington, Texas, he is with the reliability section in the astronautics division of Chance-Vought Aircraft Company.

Gregory's wife, the former Marian Gavin, studied professional writing at O.U. from 1938 to 1940 and is now a successful magazine fiction writer. They have two children, Gavin, 15, and Lynn, 13.

Kenneth L. Kraettli, son of University Secretary Emil L. Kraettli, spent three semesters at O.U. after a year at Wentworth Military Academy in Lexington, Mo. An award-winning florist in San Diego, California, Kraettli has been a partner in the Kenard Florists for the past 10 years.

Brett's familiar face was recognized by all the Sooners writing in this month. Max S. Lale, '38journ, Marshall, Tex., knew all three. Those tagging Brett alone were Lawrence E. Beattie, '17ba, '20Law, Ardmore; Avis Stoll, '39, Kansas City, Co., and Dr. Claude B. Knight, '33bs, '35med, Wewoka. Va Rue L. Bailey, '40Lib.sci, '43ed, '57m.
