

THE COLLEGE STUDENT

... as others see him

Who actually has the best view of The College Student? The dean of his college? The landlady at his boarding house? The merchant on the Campus Corner? The minister of his church? They each see him every day, each in a different setting, each from a different point of view. They have watched his counterparts from other generations go through the same experience of growing up in a college community. If The College Student has changed in character, attitude and habits over the years, they certainly ought to recognize the difference. And if he looks and acts pretty much as his predecessors did, they ought to be able to see that, too.
