The Mark of Distinction

3

Within the faculty of the University of Oklahoma there is a core of professors whose teaching and research have placed them at the top in their fields of study. This cornerstone of academic greatness is the subject of the "Anatomy of Excellence" article.

New Ways to Teach Reading

11

Adults with deficiencies in reading rate and comprehension are running into trouble as they attempt to keep up with developments in their professions, fulfill college requirements and still read occasionally for personal pleasure.

The Art of Being Modern

14

"I don't know much about art; I just know what I like" is an attitude familiar to Art Museum Director Sam Olkinetzky, who has prepared this article for the layman who would like to know what those modern artists are trying to say.

Conversation Piece—Favorite Professors

Six alumni were asked to reminisce on their college classroom favorites, and they responded with some anecdotes involving such well-known names as Dale, Reeves, Felgar, Casey, James, Thornton, Kulp, Merrill and Wardell.
