How were Homecoming ceremonies observed when you were at O.U.?

MRS. GRADY D. HARRIS JR.
(Alice June Hunter, '47ed, '50m.ed)
Oklahoma City

MRS. HARRIS—The things I remember most about Homecoming were the house and float decorations. These were things that took a lot of preparation, and sometimes we would work three or four nights in advance of the weekend doing nothing but stuffing crepe paper. I'll never forget the exciting parades downtown and around the campus corner, and the University always had a dance either the night before or the night of Homecoming in the Union ballroom.

How were Homecoming ceremonies observed when you were at O.U.?

MRS. WILL H. WILLIS
(Madeline Coquet, '33ba, '36ma)
Duncan

MRS. WILLIS—Homecoming, 30 or more years ago, is a hodge-podge of memories: of old grads and students standing in an icy rain to watch the Homecoming parade; of the frantic efforts to fasten down the crepe paper house decorations when a "norther" blew in; of the annual pow-wow the Indian students held on the north oval the night before the game, when they beat the tom-toms all night. Homecoming is all mixed up with other campus memories like the "no car" rule, the ten-cent taxis, the three-legged campus dog, Tripod; the Oklahoma City interurban, the forbidden and mysterious D.D.M.C., the kidnapping of the engineering queen by some enterprising law students. I can only remember one particular float in the Homecoming parade of '32. That was the year that the Ruf Necks had vowed they would not shave until we won a football game and believe me, we weren't winning many in those days. I remember that float, a disreputable old truck adorned by unshaven Ruf Necks, because the only man in my life, at that time, (as a matter of fact, he still is) rode it in bearded glory. Homecoming was fun then. It still is, but it's a little sad, too, for all old grads.

How were Homecoming ceremonies observed when you were at O.U.?

MRS. ED WAITE CLARK
(Pattie Pitts Hudson, '26fa)
Bartlesville

MRS. CLARK—I don't remember that we did so much Homecoming decorating when I was at O.U. Of course, the school was much smaller then. Since we've had sons and daughters at O.U. and we've gone back there through the years, it's really hard to remember what we did do when I was in school. But, I know that our decorations were not nearly as elaborate as those in the 1940's or '50's. Keeping in mind that we had about 3,000 students and the football teams we were playing were those such as Edmond. And there weren't many alums coming home either. You can see there was not much to prepare for as far as decorations and such are concerned. But, we did have our Homecoming with Homecoming dinners in the various houses, and there were always dances.

MRS. HENRY—I really can't remember too much about Homecoming, it's been so long ago. When I was in school, I don't think there were any Homecoming ceremonies as such. The big days back then were Father's and Daughter's days. Homecomings in recent years have been much better organized than they were formerly. We had our Homecomings, but nothing special was done on those week-ends. I suppose this was due to the interest involved—students wouldn't think as much of it as alumni coming back to school for a football weekend; and in those days, there weren't many alumni coming back to school.

How were Homecoming ceremonies observed when you were at O.U.?

MRS. JOHN ALDEN LOVE
Shawnee

MRS. LOVE—When I first went to O.U., Homecoming was a colorful affair with all of the floats, house decorations and parades. I remember quite well stuffing crepe paper into chicken wire as we worked for days preparing for the Homecoming weekend. At our sorority house, part of us would work on the house decorations, and the rest of us would work on a float. This all took a lot of time and hard work, but it was fun. Later, the parades and floats were eliminated, and now there are no more house decorations. When I went back to Homecoming three or four years later, there was nothing to see. I miss it, actually. The big house decorations were beautiful. It just doesn't seem as exciting as it used to be. Dad's Day, Band Day and Homecoming just seem to be days with names now. But, it is still fun to go back and visit the school and sorority house during those weekends.

ther of Bob Mathias, former Olympic champion. He and four other members of the '23 squad now are physicians. Two team members made Phi Beta Kappa.

Despite the historic triumph over Washington, the 1923 team finished the season with a 3-5 record. One of those losses came at the hands of Kansas, 7-3, in the new stadium's muddy dedication game. The losers' three points were registered on a 45-yard field goal by Bowles.

"We didn't have too good a record," remarked Bowles, "but how could we? We didn't have anybody from Texas! We sure were good students though."

Naturally, O.U. football did not steal all of the headlines in 1923. For example, Dempsey knocked out Firpo at the Polo Grounds that year. In Oklahoma, Governor Walton was impeached despite the fact he called out the national guard to prevent the vote on it, and the Oklahoma Daily reported that enrolment at O.U. was "3,192 and still climbing."

But the manner in which former players and coaches spoke at their reunion, it was Bennie Owen's ability to produce winning teams and good athletes that always stood in the forefront of their hearts and minds.

Hugh McDermott, captain of the 1918 team and coach under Owen in 1923, said that he can easily recall the days when "ballplayers shaved at home instead of on television." About Owen, he said:

"I have been happily associated with Bennie for 48 years. I know of no man who made the football Hall of Fame with fewer men or as inferior equipment. Our hats are off to you Bennie. You taught us to play better than we were, and you will always be in our hearts like the master that you are."

Bristow said although he never played on a championship team, his memories are of a team of champions.

"We were champions led by a kind and gentle coach," he said. "This was a coach who taught us, not by words, but by precept and example. It is with little wonder we will always remember Bennie Owen."

"Bennie, when you selected us to play on your team, it was an honor," said Ed Bockman. "On or off the field, you were always known as a perfect gentleman."

The remembrances of days past and the tributes to the little giant were climaxed when Ed Johnson, Owen's next-door neighbor from 1912 to 1924, presented his coach with a handsome plaque which will hold a prominent spot in the "O" Club.

When it came time for the honored man himself to say a few words, Owen, trying to hold back nostalgic tears, appeared speechless. Finally, he was able to utter:

"Gee Cly, youse guys!"

And with that, the entire aggregation adjourned to watch O.U. defeat Clemson in the house that Bennie built.

Integrity

conditions which foster the dependable and constant loyalty of the individual to what he honestly believes to be right and good. And here are seven specific suggestions for doing the job:

1. It is the public responsibility to know the facts about our changing societies—the economic, demographic, political, educational, legal facts, and the local, national, international developments that are involved in making for changes in the world.
2. It is the public responsibility to interpret and understand the meaning of these facts and developments, and their implications for the nurture of persons of integrity.
3. It is the public responsibility to analyze the implications for the role of leaders in providing education that will help people to realize the opportunities evolving from a rapidly changing world, and the relation of these opportunities to personal integrity.
4. It is the public responsibility to increase study and action, and to stimulate support from the university and other institutions and from professional and lay persons.
5. It is the public responsibility to determine the criteria, and a system of priorities, for deciding what kinds of projects should be undertaken to relieve those unnecessary pressures that tend to destroy integrity, and to create those situations that tend to foster it.
6. It is the public responsibility to work out a possible and workable plan of action and a time-table for undertaking the development of such a program which will foster the growth of persons in integrity.
7. It is the public responsibility to learn about and to utilize tried and true techniques (gimmicks, as I like to call them) for establishing those conditions which will nurture persons of integrity.

Why? Why, because integrity is the Number One public concern! Or else? Or else, Death!

And now, I'm no longer frightened; for, as the first speaker, my job is done. But, if I'm correct in my suggestions this evening, your job is just begun!
