From April, 1924, issues of the Oklahoma Daily: Four students, two men and two women, have been suspended from school after they were apprehended by school authorities who were searching for student cars here. The four were found car-riding after 10:30 p.m. unchaperoned and in a student-owned car. . . . In the column Hear and There, a coed states "My roommate says the only objection she has to her fashionable, 'rap-around' skirt these windy days is that it doesn't." . . . Alumni roll now 3,950, directory reveals. . . . The campus "Rudy" and the jelly of the shirt sleeves would be eliminated from Soonerland if Prof. Leonard Logan of the school of business had his way. Professor Logan made the request that no students come to his classes without tie and coat. . . . Military training on the campus, recalled Dr. Guy Y. Williams during the annual Army inspection of ROTC here this week, began as a result of a mass meeting of students one Thursday afternoon in April, 1917, shortly after war was declared by the United States. Dr. Williams was chosen colonel, Ben G. Owen, lieutenant colonel and Dr. S. W. Reeves, major. . . . At the movies: Lon Chaney in The Hunchback of Notre Dame. . . . Lon Chaney is a former Guthrie boy and lived near there in the early nineties, according to the Guthrie Leader. Several Guthrie people remember the freckle-faced bushy-headed kid who was the clown of his high school days and was said to be the best kid trick horseback rider in town. . . . With the brave police force starting a drive against the petters by dragging ten into court for Sunday evening loitering in dark places, it seems as if there might be a fallacy to the old adage, "All the world loves a lower." . . . The University of Oklahoma will be well represented in student trips to Europe this summer. Cost of the voyage, limited to college men only, is $85 each way.

From the April, 1934, issue of the Sooner Magazine, "Soonerland in Brief": Maj. Harry J. Malony, commandant of the University ROTC unit, declared that the military armaments of the U.S. were inadequate. He stated the United States ranked third in population and seventeenth in military defense power. . . . Sooner football lettermen created a bit of excitement when they returned their sweaters to the Field House and demanded bigger, better and thicker red and white jerseys. They were met by Ben Owen, director, who agreed with them that the quality was poor and that new sweaters should be bought. . . . Jimmy Hopkins, Oklahoma News sports editor, defended the noble art of booing at basketball games at a meeting of the state sports writers association held at the University. Dr. F. C. Allen, Kansas coach, addressed the group and said booing was rowdiness. Hopkins disagreed with Dr. Allen and said the fans paid their money and should be allowed to hoot. . . . From "Jobs for Students": Four hundred students whose finances would not have allowed them to continue their studies at the University were placed on the federal payroll and given work on the campus in February. The undergraduates are required to be enrolled in full-time work and are restricted to earning $20 a month. Average salary is $15 per month. Students given aid by direct appropriation of Congress were required to appear before faculty committees to establish their qualifications for work. The students had to be passing all hours of University work, of good character and in dire need of assistance.

From the April, 1944, issue of the Sooner Magazine, "Reactions to Novel Vary":

Dr. M. S. Shockley, associate professor of English, in an article in American Literature, states that he found two main bodies of opinion on The Grapes of Wrath in Oklahoma, "One, that this is an honest, sympathetic and artistically powerful presentation of economic, social and human problems; the other, the great majority, that this is a vile, filthy book, an outsider's malicious attempt to smear the state of Oklahoma with outrageous lies. The latter opinion, I may add, is frequently accompanied by the remark: 'I haven't read a word of it, but I know it's a dirty lie.' Rarely did someone say, 'We should do something about these conditions; we should do something to help those people.' Generally, they said: 'We should deny it vigorously.'" . . . Present for the launching of the USS Naifeh at Orange, Texas, were Mrs. Rathia Naifeh, Norman, mother of Lt. (jg) Alfred Naifeh, in whose honor the destroyer escort was named, and his two brothers. Lieutenant Naifeh died in a Pacific naval battle in 1942. . . . Overseas: Lt. J. F. Malone, Norman, wrote recently of a baseball game he helped stage in the South Pacific: "Grandstand vendors added a touch of comedy by passing out red hot atabrine tablets and ice cold insect repellent as substitutes for the usual popcorn and soft drinks." . . . None of the comments about the weather we receive from correspondents in New Guinea is complimentary. Capt. Floyd A. Sooy writes that the weather there has now been reduced to a very simple formula: "If you can't see the mountains, it's raining; and if you can see the mountains, it's going to rain."

From April, 1954, issues of Oklahoma Daily: Engine Queen Smacked; Athlete Is Only Suspect, by Arlen Southern. Amidst the gaiety and laughter of Frontier Day, a grotesque crime took place. Shaken and bewildered, the 1954 Engine queen, Susie Reily, related a tale of stark terror late Thursday afternoon. At 3:30 p.m. the attractive coed was watching frontier festivities at the east side of the administration building when an unidentified person reached over, gave vent to an impulse—and kissed her on the cheek. A witness to the smacking, Pat Sessions, Idabel senior, called Marshals Kurt and Bobby Burris, who pursued the villain with gusto. After a three-block chase, the vengeful lawmen saw the speedy assailant enter Jefferson House. This was a stunning blow to the marshals, both of whom are football players. Duty is duty, however, and the elder Burris declared late Thursday that he had acquired enough evidence to make an arrest. He declined comment on the suspect's identity. Miss Reily, pretty and blonde, was obviously shaken by the event as it was a terrible blow to her social standing. In the true tradition of her sorority, she had never been kissed. Miss Reily is a Pi Beta Phi. Frontier sheriff Lem Walker announced the trial for the culprit would be held immediately. Prosecuting lawyers are John Smith, Oklahoma City and Fred Harris, Walters. Standing up for the yet unknown defendant are Stuart Strasner, Boise City, and Horace Walker, Oklahoma City. Judge for the trial is the honored Leo Winters, Hooker. . . . Is the high school graduate of today prepared for entrance to an institution of higher learning? Apparently not. Only one house at Cross Center was above the all men's grade average of 2.385. . . . Headline: Regents Approve Cars for Freshmen.

The Scholars

thing else right now. I like to read, because I am trying to discover what I myself think. When I read, I can see what other people think, and their outlooks and opinions help me to develop my own. The philosophies of these authors present me with angles I have never considered and make me look at my own ideas differently. When I have finished reading a book, I try to decide what the author was saying. Next, I see if I agree with him. After I have gone over his ideas, I accept what he has said, accept a part of what he has said or mentally file away his ideas for future comparison with other ideas.

"After reading, my second love is meeting new people and talking with them. I benefit from this communication of thoughts. In a book, the author presents his statement to the reader, who accepts or rejects it; in a conversation, an exchange, an out-pouring as well as an in-pouring, exists.

"All new people fascinate me in some way, but I especially enjoy foreign people. I enjoy them as much as I do their food—immensely. For some reason, foreigners simply make me happy. In fact, many things, such as Bach, good jazz, the ocean and beagle dogs, to name a few, have this mysterious power to flood me with waves of happiness that is joy, contentment or bliss, depending on my original mood.

"Walking is my third favorite activity. When I am walking, I do some of my clearest, most logical thinking. Besides walking, I like to fence, swim and play tennis. I do none of these things, thinking included, as well as I would prefer.

"This leads to the reason I am anticipating my college career. I know that in college I will have the opportunity to improve my thinking. I know that there I will find new things to make me happy—new books and new people."

It is quality and ambition from students such as this that O.U. seeks in perpetuating its University Scholars program. Dean Morris calls them young men and women "endowed with lively imaginations, inquiring intellects and the freedom of their dreams."

And as more grade reports come flowing into the University College office, Dean Couch most likely will repeat:

"The Scholars certainly have helped me break the shackles of my imagination about what people can do."
