THE THEATRE
Located in Whiting, Indiana just a few miles south of Chicago, it is easily accessible from the Chicago area. The house closed several years ago when a fire destroyed the Cinemascope screen and some of the stage rigging.

It was destined to make way for a parking lot when the present owners purchased it for the future home of the Uptown Wurlitzer. A feverish period of remodeling ensued as the damaged stage was repaired, a new cinemascope screen installed and a complete facelift affording the water-damaged foyer (caused by burst water pipes during a previous winter).

Resplendent with sparkling crystal chandeliers, a tinkling fountain and new carpeting, as well as yards and yards of Persian velour drapes rescued from other not-so-fortunate first run Chicago houses, the new Hoosier Auditorium Theatre opened in August of 1967. The grand opening was complemented with live pipe organ music, played on the small Kimball originally installed in the theatre.

Originally seating 1000, the capacity has been reduced slightly to facilitate the installation of the Echo Organ and to extend the apron of the main stage. The theatre is currently operating as a motion picture house on weekends and features special musical programs on a monthly basis. —Bart Morton, Chicago

PIPE DREAMS
WMAQ & WENR. Almost at once, there was an outburst of: "We want you!" The 20 or so amateurs who made up the audience were ready to sing along with "The Perfect Song. " His trio accompanied "Amos & Andy" from the very start. This was the order of the day until NBC purchased WMAQ and WENR. Almost at once, the theme was transferred to the organ, this being the WENR 3-13 Wurlitzer in the Civic Opera Bldg. studio. Dean Fossler was the organist from the start with "The Perfect Song" and he continued through 1942.

LEE ERWIN CAPTIVATES ROCHESTER
by Lloyd E. Klos

One of the nicest fellows in the business, the "Moon River Man," Lee Erwin, did the honors for the Rochester Theatre Organ Society on its Wurlitzer, March 13. The former star of the Arthur Godfrey show (22 years), tootled his little Volvo to the Flower City and made a hit with two audiences. On the morning prior to his concert, he was interviewed on the Eddie Meath TV show, telling of his experiences and talking about the growing theatre organ hobby.

Lee began his concert with music he has composed for the Rudolph Valentino film, "The Eagle." Having played for the silents in their waning years, Lee then did a medley of "Sounds of the Silents" which included "Sleepy Time Gal," "When Day Is Done" and "One Alone," the latter built into an astounding climaxed. Terrific!

Next came Kreisler's "Caprice Viennois," a superb concert treatment, followed by the arrangement which Lee used when at WLW on the "Moon River" Show. He explained that this number was the theme, and in order to enable the DeVore Sisters trio to sing it, the key had to be dropped from B Major to F Major.

"Cabaret" and "The Apple Tree" were next, and effectively intertwined was the familiar clarinet wail of the "Rhapsody in Blue." Counter melodies were used throughout the program, attesting to Lee's superb early musical education. Next, the audience was asked to imagine a simple silent movie plot, with a "Boy-Meets-Girl" theme. Using background music for the Pickford film "My Best Girl," which he had composed, the organist played a medley of six songs. Three of these will be published.

The last time Lee Erwin had been to Rochester was in 1950, when with Abe Burrows and Janette Davis, he took part in the 25-year celebration of station WHEC. This reporter found a picture of Lee and Janette playing musical spoons, which he presented to the organist. Eddie Baker joined us backstage at intermission, and the memories of the old days were flying thick and fast between the two organists.

Second half began with three numbers from "Porgy and Bess," plus the lifting showtune, "Someone to Watch Over Me." Irving Berlin was represented by "Always" and "Remember," and then came five numbers featured by the Beatles. Lee explained that if "one strips away the guitar and drum sounds, these pieces are very fine melodies." How right he was! Especially "When I'm Sixty-Four" and "Being for the Benefit of Mr. Kite."

As is the custom with all artists performing here, they greet their audiences in the front lobby after the show, and it was here that Lee promised to work with this reviewer in preparation of his biography for this magazine.
